STEEL MEN SAY STRIKE IS SURE

Gary Alone Can Prevent Big Walkout Monday, Leaders Declare

By International News Service.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 18.—"The steel strike order for September 22 stands."

This was the positive statement made by J. L. Beaghen, organizer for the American Federation of Labor, here today.

"Mr. Gary is the only power on earth that can prevent a strike," said Mr. Beaghen. "Not even Mr. Gompers can stop it."

At the headquarters of the strike committee employes were busy sending out circulars in seven languages calling the men out next Monday. The circular read:

"The workers in the iron and steel mills and blast furnaces not working under union agreements are requested not to go to work on September 22, and to refuse to resume their employment until such time as the demands of the organization have been conceded by the steel corporations.

WARNED AGAINST VIOLENCE.

"The union committees have tried to arrange conferences with the heads of the steel companies in order that they might present our legitimate demands for the right of collective bargaining, higher wages, shorter hours and better working conditions. But the employers have steadfastly refused to meet them.

"It therefore becomes our duty to support the committee's claims, in accordance with the practically unanimous strike vote, by refusing to work in the mills on or after September 22, until such time as our just demands have been granted. And in our stoppage of work let there

Gowns Going Up From Bottom and Down From the Top

London, Sept. 18.—Fashionable gowns are still getting scantier, according to buyers who returned from Paris today, after an inspection of the late Fall models. At present the fashionable skirt stops just below the knee, but fashion experts maintain that before the new year they will have receded at least four inches—and may be more.

Followers of the bare leg fashion to be really chic must "make up" their legs. This is the edict of Frank Brighton of the Maison Lewis, who has just returned from Paris. The real smart Parisian, according to Brighton, wears the flimsiest stockings, $30 shoes, and makes up with a tincture to lend the appearance of sunburn, powder and paint—all used on the legs.

According to this expert smartness now requires of an evening dress that it reach only to the waistline in front as well as in back. It begins to look as though Paris will be her old gay self again within a few months.

MASKED TRAIN BANDITS GET $75,000

Quebec, Ont., Sept. 18.—Masked bandits held up the mail clerks on an express train on the Canadian government railway, near Harlaka, early today, and escaped with $75,000.

The robbers escaped from the train at St. Thomas with their loot. Armed posses are in pursuit, but the robbers are believed to have fled over the line into the United States.

The money had been shipped from Montreal last night and was consigned to Halifax. Near Harlaka the bandits, who had evidently been riding in a passenger coach, stealthily made their way into the mail car, with automatic pistols in their hands. The clerks were overpowered, bound and gagged.

It was not until the train reached St. Thomas, some distance from Harlaka, that the robbery was discovered. The clerks were then released and gave descriptions of the robbers. Search was immediately ordered along the line, but no trace of the men was found. They are believed to have followed the money shipment from Montreal.

The express was the Ocean Limited, one of the crack trains of the Canadian government railway.

According to the clerks the train had just left Harlaka when the door or the mail car burst in with a crash and five men, all masked and armed, entered. The leader shouted: "Hands up!" and the clerks lost no time in obeying.

Then, while some of the men collected the money sacks, others bound and gagged the clerks.

House and Senate Pay Remarkable Tribute to Pershing

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 18.—Congress laid aside its dignity today to pay enthusiastic tribute to General Pershing, leader of America's victorious troops.

The signal honor of a joint session of Senate and House to welcome him was the tribute of Congress to the leader of the men who fought and carried on to victory those principles which Congress declared in April, 1917.

Early in the day anxious crowds began to besiege the Capitol to obtain admission to the galleries to witness the unusual spectacle, but admission was by ticket only and the tickets were far too few to satisfy even a small portion of those who sought them.

Senator Cummins of Iowa, president pro tempore of the Senate, Speaker Gillett of the House, and Champ Clark, the veteran legislator of Missouri, the home of General Pershing, were chosen to express the gratitude of Congress and the nation for his victorious direction of the American expeditionary forces.

POLICE OF LYNN REFUSE LABOR CHARTER

Affiliation of the Lynn police with the American Federation of Labor is now improbable, according to Mayor Walter H. Creamer, who declared, following a conference with officers of the union, that he had been assured they would not claim the charter now ready for signatures to become an authorized and chartered body.

The police, according to Mayor Creamer, affirmed their loyalty as public servants, thus bringing to an end what at first looked like a repetition of the Boston police strike. They are convinced, said the Mayor, that a desertion of duty would avail them nothing.

William A. Nealey, president of the State Branch of the American Federation of Labor, admitted to Mayor Creamer that the police had not claimed their charter, which was still in his safe, and that the men had determined it would be to their best interests to abandon all effort to affiliate with the federation.

The police, according to the mayor, told him they acted in good faith when they petitioned for a charter.

The mayor was known to have been a warm friend of organized labor, and, with this in view, they had prepared for affiliation, they said. The strife and rioting accompanying the strike in Boston, however, led the mayor to warn the police that if they joined it would cause their dismissal.

HOLDS SUCH ORGANIZATIONS MENACE TO PUBLIC WELFARE

Washington, Sept. 18.—That President Wilson is opposed to the unionization of police was the interpretation placed by District Commissioner Louis Brownlow upon a telegram received by him from the Chief Executive, and read to the District Committee of the Senate today. The telegram follows:

"I hope that you understood my brief telegram of the other day. I am quite willing that you should tell the Senate commitee that my position in my conversations with you was exactly the same as I have expressed recently in speeches here in the West, and of course I am desirous as you are of dealing with the police force in the most just and generous way, but that I think that any association of the police force of the capital city, or any great city, whose object is to bring pressure upon the public or the community such as will endanger the public peace or embarrass the maintenance of order should in no case be countenanced or permitted.

(Signed) WOODROW WILSON."

Commissioner Brownlow told the committee that the telegram came in response to a request made to the President that he state his position on the affiliation of the police union of Washington with the A. F. of L. The telegram referred to by the President urged the commissioners to defer until after the President's labor conference their mandate that the police must either quit the union or the force.

Commissioner Brownlow declared he had conferred with President Wilson twice on the proposal of the affiliation of the police union of Washington with the A. F. of L. He declared that President Wilson had heartily endorsed the position taken by the commissioners of the District of Columbia in opposing the affiliation of the police with the A. F. of L.

President Wilson had previously indicated, Brownlow said, that he believed that a unionized police force would be a menace to the public welfare. He declared that President Wilson had agreed with him that there might be a dual allegiance of the police affiliated with the A. F. of L., which would tend to destroy the confidence of the public in the neutrality of the officers of the law in the event of a strike.

Commissioner Brownlow told the members of the Senate committee that the police should have increased wages, but he opposed their unionizing in order to get more pay.

STATE MAY PROSECUTE 19 PARK POLICEMEN

The possibility that the nineteen members of the Metropolitan Park police on trial for insubordination may be prosecuted by the Attorney-General for violation a State law, was indicated by Commissioner Everett C. Benton today. He quoted Chapter 108, Section 9, of the Revised Laws of Massachusetts, which provides a fine of not more than $100 or imprisonment for not more than 3 months, on conviction. This reads: "Constables, city marshals, chiefs of police and all other officers within the various cities and towns shall aid the Governor in the performance of his duty when called upon."

ROHLFS OUT TO BREAK ALTITUDE RECORD

Mineola, L. I., Sept. 18.—Roland Rohlfs, test pilot for the Curtiss Airplane Company, took off here at 12:06 o'clock today to attempt to break the altitude record. He flew a Curtiss triplane equipped with a 12-cylinder 400-h.p. motor.

MACON TO SUBMIT ISSUE TO VOTE OF PEOPLE

Macon, Ga., Sept. 18.—Macon has adopted "the easier way" to solve her problem whether the police and firemen will be permitted to belong to labor unions. The order adopted by the civil srvice commission providing that no union member of the police or fire department could remain in the service has been rescinded, and the question will be decided at the polls at the coming city election. Both police and firemen continue their duties with union cards in their pockets.

19 PARK POLICEMEN ON TRIAL FOR REFUSING TO OBEY ORDERS

6 GUARDSMEN ACCIDENTALLY SHOT IN ROXBURY

that he intimated to the patrolmen that they would not be called upon to do street duty in Boston.

Chairman de las Casas read into the record his orders, which contained a letter from Governor Coolidge calling on the Metropolitan forces to help suppress disorder in Boston.

Some doubt as to the reported decision of counsel for the Boston Policemen's Union to apply for a writ of mandamus was expressed today. It was also stated that if this decision was carried out no action would be taken until after the Central Labor Union meeting on Sunday.

Other features of the local police situation were the accidental shooting of six State Guardsmen early today, continued voting by unions on a general strike, and the receipt of letters by Commissioner Curtis asking that he reinstate the striking policemen.

COMMOTION IN CITY HALL.

City Hall was thrown into an uproar today when a State Guardsman's rifle was accidentally discharged in the office of the City Treasurer. The bullet imbedded itself in the wall, and Patrolman Brooks of Station 2, who was on guard, was injured in the leg by flying splinters.

It was stated that another examination for the new Boston police force may be held September 26, at which time a State-wide examination will be held for the police service of other cities and towns.

The shooting of the State guardsmen was not officially announced, but it is understood that it took place in the guardroom of Dudley street police station when one of the men was cleaning his riot gun. It was accidentally discharged and buckshot was hurled into the legs of six soldiers. A surgeon was called to attend the men, who were then removed to the hospital in a police ambulance.

The victims are said to have been Harold Cuail, No. 275A Summer street, Somerville; Asa K. Purdy, No. 12 Oliver street, Watertown; Robert J. Lusk, No. 346 Putnam avenue, Cambridge; John Alexander, No. 16 Varnum street, Arlington; George Parker, No. 118 Paul Revere road, Arlington, and William Jackson, No. 330 Hurley street, Cambridge.

MANY LABOR MEETINGS.

Because of the desire of President John F. McInnes and other officers of the Policemen's Union to address meetings of other labor organizations, it was decided to hold afternoon meetings only for the policemen. A secret meeting of the Boston Stereotypers' Union was held in old Elks' Hall, on Hayward place, which was addressed by the police leaders.

Boston Electrical Workers' Union 104 (linemen) also met in Wells Memorial Building, and the matter of voting for or against a general strike was referred to the executive board.

Electrical Workers' Union 103 also met, as did the Boston Cable Splicers' Union and the Bridge Tenders' Union. The latter was said to have voted to support the policemen. The various unions of the building trades are holding nightly meetings of their more than 25,000 members.

Superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley declared, contrary to the repeatedly quoted statements of President John F. McInnes of the Boston Police Union, that several of the striking policemen had applied to him for reinstatement on the Boston force, offering to resign from the union in order to get their old jobs back.

Asked how many men had so applied the Superintendent's reply was: "Several."

WILL ALL GO BACK TOGETHER.

Earlier in the day President McInnes was quoted as saying: "Stories to the effect that captains have lists of union men seeking reinstatement are false. Not one of our men has sought reinstatement, and when we are taken back it will be all together."

He further stated that "Those men who are returning from vacations and being assigned to duty have no affiliation with the union."

Commenting on this phase of the situation a prominent police official said: "Men who have been on vacation or on sick leave and who can show either that they never joined the union or that they resigned therefrom, have been assigned to duty. They can hardly be called 'striking policemen.'

"The striking policemen, that is the men who went out September 9, cannot be returned to duty, as by a decision of the attorney-general, under the civil service act, their posts have been automatically declared vacant after they have been absent without leave for seventy-two hours.

DECLARE PLACES VACANT.

"Instead of declaring them suspended or discharged, the Commissioner has simply declared their places vacant. They have simply ceased to exist as police officers.

"Several police officers who reported sick on Wednesday or Thursday, and reported for duty the following day, were accepted for duty upon showing their resignations from the union. These men worked all through the general walkout and are not classed with the men who participated in that walkout.

"The cases of these men, however, have not been finally settled, and it is likely when things get back to normal that they will be called upon to show the reason of their course of action."

SAYS A. F. OF L. SOLID FOR POLICE

Guy Oyster, secretary to President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, declined to discuss this matter before he left town for Washington. When boarding the train he is said to have repeated the statement that the Federation is solidly behind the police, and will be with them to the finish, and to have admitted the improbability of a general strike in Boston.

Earlier in the day he gave out the following statement on the situation:

"Whatever else has resulted from this unfortunate situation in Boston, a condition with reference to the treatment of the Boston police force has been disclosed of which few citizens were aware, and of which the officials in charge might well be ashamed.

"The promptness with which the Governor has undertaken to see that at least some of these conditions be corrected is a confession that the state of things existed before the police took action that justified the police in their effort to improve them. Their grievances were many and almost intolerable—long hours (10 1-2 to 17 hours per day), wages insufficient to maintain a decent standard of life, unsanitary conditions and the denial of rights enjoyed by practically every other police force.

MADE VOICE HEARD.

"These facts are acknowledged by all, even the police commissioner. These conditions were not bettered by the thirteen years' efforts of the Social Club of the Boston police. When the present police commissioner came into office, one of his first acts was to ignore the Social Club altogether, and in its place he inaugurated a system of his own for presenting grievances, which proved unsatisfactory and no real benefit.

"The men then organized and applied for a charter from the American Federation of Labor in order to make their voice heard, and it was heard all over the country, where the unhappy lot of the policemen is now receiving thoughtful consideration which they never could have obtained except as a result of the stand taken by the red-blooded Americans of the Boston police force.

"As fine a body of men as I ever saw, 300 of them ex-doughboys in Uncle Sam's army, and their president, John F. McInnes, the proud possessor of four honorable discharges from the United States army, and four wounds received while fighting under the Stars and Stripes, now being called 'deserters' because they had the manhood and the courage to strike, after two weeks' notice, for their human rights and constitutional guarantees, after being assured by the statements of the police commissioner that any situation caused by the form of protest then adopted, could and would be taken care of.

"19 MEN KICKED OUT."

"I am assured that not one of the men had the faintest idea that the regrettable conditions caused by the commissioner's negligence could occur. The men were aware that a large number of policemen would remain on duty, and these men, I am told, were sufficient to have controlled the situation if properly utilized.

"Moreover, nineteen of the men did not strike, but were kicked out, and are now looking to the American Federation of Labor for financial assistance to drive the wolf from their family doorsteps.

"Recruit a new force from men who are ready to subscribe to involuntary servitude—that they cannot leave the force after two weeks' notice without being called a 'deserter,' who will surrender his constitutional right of being heard by a spokesman of his own choosing, who will sacrifice those fundamental principles for a job, and what kind of a force will it be?

"The policemen were forced to organize in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor to be heard, and they were forced to strike to defend the life of their organization, which they only did after two weeks' notice and the commissioner's assurance that the city would be protected."

BUSY CONSTRUCTING NEW FORCE.

According to officials at police headquarters the police strike has passed into history as far as they are concerned, and they are now engaged simply in constructing a new police force.

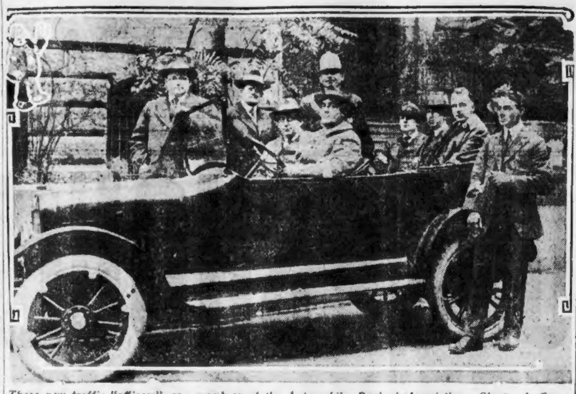
Asked for definite information to end the contradictory statement being made concerning the present status of the new force, Superintendent Crowley said:

"There were twenty men who had been certified by the Civil Service Board, following an examination held some weeks ago. Twelve of these reported here in obedience to orders yesterday, and at that time signified their intention of joining the force. They have not been sworn in yet.

"One hundred and twenty odd men have been certified in addition to this, but have not yet been ordered to report. These men were certified following the decision of the attorney-general that war veterans living in any part of the State would be accepted as members of the force."

It was further stated that Commissioner Curtis had completed plans for a campaign to be waged all through the Commonwealth for recruits for the police force of Boston. These men, when sworn in, will receive a salary of $1,400 a year and their first uniforms will be issued free to them.

AUTO MEN KEEP TRAFFIC ON THE MOVE



These new traffic "officers" are members of the Automobile Dealers' Association. Chester I. Campbell is in the centre of the standing group, beside Sergeant B. J. Hoppe, traffic expert. Business Men Warn Labor That Sentiment Is Against Strike to Support Police

The board of directors of the Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce at a meeting voted to call upon the members of the Boston unions affiliated with the Central Labor Union "to solemnly consider the certain consequences of a sympathetic strike in support of the Police Union at a time when the powerful moral approval of the great unorganized public is unquestionably in support of the attitude of the Commissioner of Police."

The Massachusetts Chamber represents all the boards of trade and chambers of commerce in Massachusetts outside of Boston, many of which have taken action during the past week in support of the Governor and the Commissioner of Police. The resolve adopted by the directors was as follows:

"Resolved, That the board of directors of the Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce, appreciating the gravity of the situation and the menace to the peace and security of the Commonwealth, does hereby express to the city of Boston and its citizens its regret that violent civil disorders should have occurred within its confines; to the Governor of Massachusetts, the Commissioner of Police, and the Mayor of Boston its unqualified endorsement and approval of the position taken by them toward the striking policemen and its fullest encouragement and moral support in their determination not to reinstate those responsible for this crime against civilization; that it calls upon the members of the unions in the city of Boston affiliated with the Central Labor Union to solemnly consider the certain consequences of a sympathetic strike in support of the Police Union at a time when the powerful moral approval of the great unorganized public, always in sympathy with labor's cause, is today unquestionably in support of the attitude of the Commissioner of Police; that it express its deep admiration and high regard for those members of the police force who have remained loyal to their oaths and that it condemn those who would seek to obstruct them in the exercise of their duty or embarass them for refusal to join the ranks of the strikers; that it express the warm appreciation and gratitude of all patriotic citizens of the Commonwealth to the volunteer policemen and the members of the State Guard for their admirable and courageous conduct of the duty to which they were called."

Alleged Assailants of Guardsmen Acquitted; One Held on Theft Charge

Two men, arrested yesterday in a crowd that threw stones at State Guardsmen at E and Second streets, were arraigned before Judge Edward L. Logan in the South Boston District Court today. The men are William Griffin, twenty-two, known as "Buffalo" Griffin of Bolton street, and Joseph Flaherty, twenty, of D street. When brought before the State Guardsmen it was found to be impossible to identify them as the men who threw the stones. Both were discharged.

Griffin was then rearrested, charged with the larceny of a pair of shoes from Daniel J. Sullivan, and was sentenced to one month in the House of Correction. He appealed.

Telephone Union Girls Threatened in Letter About Vote on Strike

Members of the Telephone Operators' Union were wrought up today over a threatening letter received by mail on the subject of the police strike. The letter, which is badly punctuated and misspelled, is addressed to Miss May Matthews, secretary and business agent of the union. It threatens bodily injury to the girls if they vote to walk out in sympathy with the police. At the end is drawn a skull and cross-bones.

Under date of Sept. 14, the letter reads:

"I notice in the papers of late that the telephone operators are talking of going out on a strike now let me tell you something that will proply make you girls take a look for yourselves now you know very well that the policemen of the cit of Boston are in wrong and had know right whatever to go out any more than our soldiers or sailors and to think the protection they have left for you women to be assaulted and have of night and even in the daytime and then you girls call yourselves Americans, well you all are a very poor pack of slumps and slackers if you vote for anything like going out now if you girls do go out you will be the sorry lot of girls that ever lived. You know in New York there was some time ago a Jack the Ripper, where sixteen girls wer cut and shot to pieces well that is what will happen to every telephone operator who goes out on such a mean low dirty cause as the policeman now we warn you in do time what just so sure you go out so just so sure you will meet with the fate you read in this letter you will not no the time but you will all be watched and when each one's number is drawn that is the one who will be next to get served.

"Please read this letter at your meeting night so all will have a good chance to understand now this is no fooling matter you may think so but when your time is to come that is the time we will have the laugh.

"Yours Truly, from the fair-minded citizens of Boston."

The matter was reported to the police and to the postoffice authorities.

Traffic Officer of 80 Years Among Volunteers

Boston now can boast of the most venerable traffic officer in the country and perhaps a little bit more.

He is Charles M. Hosmer, eighty years old, No. 87 St. James avenue, Back Bay, globe trotter and an expert in traffic matters.

Mr. Hosmer, distinguished in his white and flowing patriarchal beard, was one of the first men to volunteer his services today for traffic work in the present crisis to Sergeant Bernard J. Hoppe.

Paul Wise of Plymouth, another volunteer whose services were accepted for traffic work, was in command of the Provost Guard in France. He has been assigned to Governor square.

KIWANIS CLUB BACKS UP THE GOVERNOR

Resolutions expressing confidence in the ability of Governor Coolidge to safeguard the interests of city and State in the present crisis have been adopted by the Kiwanis Club, which has offered the Governor its hearty co-operation for whatever work he may ask.

Sargent Files Bond

As the trustee of a fund for the benefit of Ignatius Sargent, under the will of the late Mrs. Mary Robeson Sargent of Brookline, Charles S. Sargent, Jr., of New York city, has filed a bond in the Norfolk Probate Court for $75,000.

POLICE STRIKE DENOUNCED BY LAWYERS

Declare Walkout an Act of Perfidy and Oppose Reinstatement

Condemning the action of the Boston police in going on strike as an act of perfidy, the council of the Bar Association of Boston passed the following resolutions:

"Resolutions unanimously adopted at a special meeting of the council of the Bar Association of the city of Boston, held September 16, 1919.

"Present, Charles P. Greenough, Moorfield Storey, John L. Thorndike, James E. Cotter, Henry F. Hurlburt, John Lowell, Thomas W. Proctor, Richard M. Saltonstall, William D. Turner, James D. Colt, M. J. Sughrue, R. D. Weston, John E. Hannigan, William G. Thompson, Endicott P. Saltonstall, Arthur A. Ballantine and Floyd G. Blair, esquires.

"Whereas, The refusal by police officers of Boston to perform their duties presents issues of law and government which are of vital concern to the whole community and of peculiar interest to members of the bar;

"Now, therefore, be it resolved (1) That the policemen's abandonment of their posts was an act of perfidy and a flagrant dereliction of duty on a par with the mutiny and desertion of troops in the face of the enemy;

"(2) That membership of the police in a union affiliated with any outside labor union or federation of labor unions should not be tolerated.

"(3) That to reinstate as the guardians of law and order men who have just shown such shocking indifference to law and order and such wanton disregard to their duty to maintain them, would be a failure of public justice and would deal a severe blow at our free institutions of government.

"(4) That we heartily commend the Governor and the commissioner for the attitude they have taken, and that the secretary be directed to transmit to them copies of these resolutions."

BOSTON UNIVERSITY ADDS EQUIPMENT

The enrollment in the College of Liberal Arts of Boston University is much larger than last year, it was announced with the opening of classes today. Exact figures are not yet available. Additional equipment has been installed in the girls' gymnasium and locker rooms. The lunchroom has been made smaller, the extra space being used for new offices and one classroom. The former Gamma Delta room, a girls' study, has been transformed into a conference room for trustees and faculty. The young women of the Gamma Delta Society now use the Claflin room for study.

FIGHT OVER TREATY KILLS HOPES OF SALOONS REOPENING

ALL RESTS ON PEACE SIGNING

And the "Drys" Say There Is Little Chance of That Before January 16 Next

By Universal Service.

Washington, Sept. 18.—Confidence is growing among the "dry" members of Congress and representatives of the Anti-Saloon League that there will be no respite for John Barleycorn before his temporary banishment from the United States is made permanent.

Conditions are so shaping themselves, in the opinion of the "drys," that President Wilson will not be able to lift the war-time prohibition before the Constitutional amendment becomes operative, January 16.

The "wets," too, are apprehensive lest this shall be the situation, although they, of course, are ardently hoping for at least a brief damp spell before the long drought begins.

The war-time prohibition law is operative "until the conclusion of the present war and thereafter until the termination of demobilization, the date of which shall be determined and proclaimed by the President."

PEACE MUST COME FIRST.

Pinning their faith to the first part of this limitation, "until the conclusion of the present war," the Prohibitionists declare that the President cannot exercise his power of lifting the war-time ban until the United States is technically, as well as practically, at peace. To be technically at peace requires the ratification of the Senate.

Attorney General Palmer has ruled to this effect, and acting on the Attorney General's opinion, the President has stated that he has no power to act until the Senate acts.

There is one important phase of the situation that the "wets" seem to have entirely overlooked. With only 400,000 men now in the army, it is certain that demobilization will have been completed by the time the Senate ratifies the treaty with Germany. Then for the oasis!

AUSTRIA IN THE WAY.

But not so fast, say the "drys." There is another little matter that must be attended to by the Senate before the war is over.

The treaty with Austria is yet to be considered. This document has not even been submitted to the Senate.

The prohibitionist leaders point out that the words "until the conclusion of the present war," as contained in the war time prohibtion law, apply to Austria as well as Germany. They are firm in the assertion that President Wilson will not violate even the letter of the law in order to permit the reopening of saloons for a short interim before constitutional prohibition becomes effective.

CHANCES LOOK SLIM.

At the present rate it is not considered likely that the Senate will dispose of the German treaty within several weeks. Some members fix the date as late as the first of December.

The Austrian treaty, while not as voluminous as the German document, is still a lengthy and somewhat complicated pact, and will require careful consideration before being acted upon.

If the same course is followed with the Austrian treaty as was the case with the German agreement, the new document will be in the hands of the Foreign Relations Committee for several weeks, and then must be debated in the Senate.

Before all this can be done, January 1 will have arrived, or will be so close at hand, the "drys" contend, that the President will not deem it worth while to lift the war-time ban.

GOVERNOR'S DAY AT BROCKTON'S BIG FAIR

Governor Coolidge, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and Major-General Clarence R. Edwards will be guests of honor of the Brockton Agricultural Society at the forty-sixth annual fair at Brockton on Friday, October 3, which will be known as Governor's Day. Previous to the visit to the fair grounds, the guests will be entertained at a luncheon at the Commercial Club. The Fourteenth Regiment of the Massachusetts State Guard and a band of 125 musicians will act as an escort to the grounds. Veteran firemen organizations will compete for prizes amounting to $1,010.

CLUB ADVISED TO INDORSE LEAGUE

Unqualified indorsement of the League of Nations is urged upon the Roosevelt Club of Boston by Courtenay Crocker, in a letter made public today. Mr. Crocker states that in the straw vote taken, 12 members voted for the covenant as it stands, forty-three for ratification with reservations, and seventy-eight against the league idea in any form. He calls upon Republicans everywhere to stand by Senator Porter J. McCumber of North Dakota, rather than with Senators Lodge, Borah, McCormick and the other strong reservationists.

Mayor to Stick to Straw Hat Until Prices Drop

The bell may have rung on straw hats, but Mayor Peters hasn't heard it. His Honor is still wearing the trusty strawboy with which he went through the Summer, and threatens to stick to it indefinitely, or until the price of felt headgear takes a tumble.

The hat became a political issue when Lieutenant-Governor Channing Cox, who is a Republican, and always wears the correct thing, took a figurative shot at it.

"Andrew," said the Lieutenant-Governor suavely, "did you tell me there was a race riot in New York last night?"

"I did not," said the Mayor. "Was there?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Cox, "and it started because somebody stampeded a crowd by appearing in a straw hat after the ban was on. He is being measured for funeral clothes."

"I'll take a chance," said the Mayor. "I'll be wearing this until a pre-war felt has been cleaned. I can't afford a new one at the prevailing Fall prices."

GUNMAN TRIES TO ESCAPE; CAPTURED

Frank Baxter, said to be a New York gunman, broke away from a line of handcuffed prisoners being taken to the Superior Court at East Cambridge today, and was recaptured after an exciting chase in which a Yankee Division veteran participated.

The attempt at escape was made shortly before ten o'clock when a double line of prisoners, shackled to a chain, was being taken from the East Cambridge jail for trial in the courthouse across the street.

In the string were Baxter, Albert M. Doherty and Richard M. Sullivan, who were indicted following the shooting on the night of August 31, of Walter Berry, a newspaper photographer.

The three men who were indicted on charges of assault with attempt to murder and attempt to commit larceny, with the other prisoners were in charge of Court Officers Bert Adams and J. Willard Jones.

In the middle of the street Baxter, who is quite thin, slipped his handcuffs and dashed up Thorndike street. He turned to the left down Third street, followed by Adams, who with revolver in hand had taken up the pursuit, leaving Jones to escort the other prisoners into the courthouse.

Sergeant John Gramstorff of the 26th Division, holder of the Croix de Guerre and four citations, saw the chase from the window of the office of District Attorney Nathan Tufts, where he is employed as a clerk. Gramstorff leaped from the window and took up the pursuit in the wake of Adams.

In the meantime Sergeant Bernard McCaffrey of the Central Square police station, leisurely descended the steps of the District Court, which is located at the corner of Third and Spring streets. Looking up he saw Baxter rapidly approaching him, with Adams and his revolver a short distance behind, closely followed by Gramstorff. McCaffrey attempted to seize the fugitive as he passed, but being unsuccessful shouted: "You'd better stop or I'll bore you."

Baxter halted so abruptly that he skidded, and in response to McCaffrey's command, elevated his hands just as Adams arrived. He was again handcuffed and taken to the courthouse for trial.

PEACE ENVOYS DEFER CONSIDERING FIUME

Paris, Sept. 18.—The Peace Conference has not yet considered any suggestion for intervention at Fiume as a result of the occupation of the city by Italian troops, led by Gabriele d'Annunzio, it was learned from an authoritative source today. The conference will not act, it was said, unless the Italian government itself should be powerless to restore the situation. In this event, it is admitted that the navies of the allied and associated powers might take a hand.

The American delegation has refused all overtures from Italian circles looking to a compromise on the rival claims of Italy and Jugo-Slavia for territory on the Adriatic. The Americans stated that their position had already been made known in plain terms and did not permit of a compromise.

WOMAN CONVICTED AS A SHOPLIFTER

Mrs. Mary Smith, 38, of Essex street, Lynn, was found guilty of shoplifting by Judge Lummis in the Lynn Police Court today. She appealed and was held in $500 bonds. According to the police, she has a long record in Boston. She was arrested in a Union street store with wearing apparel valued at $60 in her possession.

The court appointed Moses Williams Jr., of Needham, a son, and Adelbert E. Buffum of Cohasset, executors, and they were required to each furnish a bond of $2,000,000. The deceased possessed $1,200,000 in personal property and real estate estimated to be worth $275,000.

Upon the death of Mrs. Williams the will directs that a daughter, Miss Eleanor Williams, receive $25,000; that a son, Moses Williams, Jr., be given one part of the remainder of the estate and the income from the balance be paid equally to Mary Eleanor Williams, Hugh Williams, Constance M. Warren and Gladys Bigelow, children of the testator.

FOSS PROMISES CURE FOR SOCIAL UNREST

Former Governor Foss, speaking at rallies in Cambridge, declared that the prevalence of strikes was an inevitable aftermath of war, and pleaded for more conciliatory attitude on the part of employers and authorities generally. He said: "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. This situation must be met in a statesmanlike way, and arbitration and conciliation must be used to the full. I regret that some men are so lacking in foresight and feeling for their fellows that they forget the age in which we live." The former Governor declared that if given the Democratic nomination for chief executive of the State, and elected, he would work out social legislation which would tend to allay unrest.

K. C. OFFICIAL HISTORY SOON TO BE COMPLETE

The official history of the Knights of Columbus, by Dr. Maurice Francis Egan and John B. Kennedy, publicity director of the organization, is nearly completed, it was announced today. The history will be in two volumes, the first dealing with the origin, growth and war achievements of the Knights, and the second, a memorial to more than 50,000 members who served in the war. Dr. Egan was formerly United States Minister to Denmark, and took an important part in the purchase by this country of the Virgin Islands. He is author of many other works. The Knights of Columbus organization was founded in 1882.

FIRST AERIAL DERBY PLANS ANNOUNCED

Washington, Sept. 18.—A transcontinental aerial derby, the first to be held under the direction of the Aerial League of America, on the sanction of the Aero Club of America has been announced.

A committee of three leading aeronautic authorities headed by Captain Charles J. Glidden as chairman, has been appointed by Rear Admiral Robert E. Perry, president of the Aerial League of America, to draft the rules and set the dates for the derby. The prizes are expected to exceed $100,000. Lieutenant Godfrey L. Cabot, president of the Aero Club of New England, is a member of the committee.

HORSE RACES TRAIN 8 MILES, AND WINS

Tired of hauling an oil truck, a dapple-gray horse, belonging to C. A. Ferson, today took a handicap of the 8:08 train from Eliot station and raced gaily on the track ahead of the train for eight miles. The horse's owner has an oil business, with yards near the Eliot station. Bent on establishing a record, the animal disdained opportunities to leave the track at Newton Centre and Chestnut Hill stations, and was finally stopped by State Guards at the Reservoir station. He had evidently fallen en route, for one side was slightly bruised. Otherwise he appeared none the worse for his adventure.

DRAGON'S "LUCK" AT CRAPS STILL HOLDS

Providence, Sept. 18.—Leon Dragon is lucky at craps. Leon is a discharged soldier from Camp Devens. A short time ago he was arrested, charged with theft of a typewriter. He told the United States Commissioner in Boston that he "thought the typewriter was his, as he won it in a crap game." Held in $500 on that charge, he has recently been working as a cook in this city. Today he was arrested again, this time on complaint of the Lawrence police, charged with misappropriation of an automobile. As Leon left for that city, in charge of a Lawrence officer, he was heard explaining to his captor that he "thought the auto was his, as he won it in a crap game."

TRUCK DRIVER'S LEG BROKEN IN OVERTURN

Plunging down a twelve-foot embankment in Wellesley Hills today, an auto truck, driven by Frank King, pinned the driver underneath, causing no further injuries than a broken leg. He was taken to the Morse Hospital at Natick. The accident happened at Linden and Forest streets, when a woman driving an automobile attempted to pass between the truck and another car. Her wheel caught in a forward wheel of the truck, causing it to swerve. The woman's car was not damaged. The truck was badly wrecked. It is the property of J. W. King, an expressman.

HALL AND BRIDE TO MAKE HOME IN FLORIDA

Lawrence, Sept. 18.—Henry H. Hall, the former lay preacher acquitted of wife murder last Fall, who last Saturday married Grace Gerow, one of his former parishioners, has gone to Florida to live, it was learned today.

Up to a late hour Wednesday Hall and his bride had been expected at the Kittredge farm on Academy road, North Andover, where Hall had been employed as farmhand since May. They went on a brief honeymoon trip following their marriage at the Lawrence City Hall last Saturday. A telephone message was received last evening from Hall, who had returned to Lawrence, that he would not go back to the farm, but was on his way South with his wife.

It was understood today that Dr. Kittredge, owner of the farm, had been disturbed by the publicity attaching to Hall's employment there. He said to an American reporter that if Hall sought to return he would be discharged. According to the foreman at the farm, Hall was a good worker, keeping much to himself and working on an invention connected with the automobile industry.

Mrs. Hall was a leading figure in the trial.

ROXBURY GIRL WEDS AT ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

Miss Bertha D. Schlichting of Roxbury and William B. Colleary of Forest Hills were married today at St. Andrew's Church, Forest Hills, by Rev. William Casey. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schlichting, No. 125 Fisher avenue, Roxbury. She is a graduate of the Sargent School.

Mr. Colleary is a graduate of Holy Cross College and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He was an ensign in the navy during the war and was for a time an instructor at the Naval School, Harvard.

Miss Helen Schlichting, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and W. L. Dougherty of Brighton best man. Mr. and Mrs. Colleary will spend their honeymoon in the White Mountains and at Poland Spring.

Revere Post Ball Tonight.

More than 300 new members were enrolled last evening in the Revere Post No. 61 of the American Legion at a meeting addressed by Harold Smart. This was the opening thrust of the post in its drive for members. A ball will be held tonight at the Revere City Hall with entertainment by the Amolsky orchestra, the Foley sisters, Josephine Burman, Agnes and Miss R. Gotleib.

EFFORT TO FORM POLICE UNION IN PROVIDENCE

Providence, Sept. 18.—Secret efforts to organize the police of this city became known today when it was reported that an organizer of the American Federation of Labor had been interviewing patrolmen.

That the police would join that organization was scouted by a high official of the department, who expressed his belief that the police were "too loyal to affiliate with any organization against the principles of the department."

The City Council recently granted a 15 per cent. increase in pay for policemen, and it is known that the commissioners, feeling such increase insufficient, are contemplating a further raise.

DELAYS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE REGISTRATION

The Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst announced today that it had been found necessary to change the date of registration for short course students from Monday, September 22, to Thursday, September 25. This will affect only those students who enroll for the special short courses; the two-year course in practical agriculture, the one-year vocational poultry course, and the one-year course in rural engineering. The change will also affect disabled men sent to the college by the Federal Board of Vocational Education to receive instruction in agriculture through the short courses.

STRIKES PREVENTABLE, ASSERTS STONEMAN

"Legal prophylactic measures" is the best cure for modern industrial strife, David Stoneman, candidate for the Republican nomination for attorney-general, told a large audience at Salem. The same preventive measures which obtain in medicine, he said, would have avoided, by the application of law, the present Boston police strike. "No modern physician strives simply to cure disease," said Mr. Stoneman. "He strives, first of all, to prevent it. And it is our duty to put laws on the statute books to protect the public in such crises as strikes."

Fish Handlers Vote Tonight

Members of the Fish Handlers' Union will meet tonight at their headquarters to vote on a sympathetic strike. The vote will be secret, and the result will be made known at the Central Labor Union meeting on Sunday.

ARREST THREE AT PISTOL'S POINT

Chelsea Police Recover a Cash Register and Lobsters, Said to Be Stolen

Three young men arrested at pistol's point in Chelsea today were found in possession of a cash register valued at $55, and live lobsters, valued at $5, which, it is alleged, they stole from the Boston Lobster Company on Meridian street, East Boston.

One of the men, John Drew, twenty-four, of St. John, N. B., was also found possessed of a loaded revolver and was convicted in Chelsea Court of carrying dangerous weapons without a permit.

The other men were James J. Attridge, thirty, of Faneuil, Brighton, and William H. Howland, thirty-two, of Second street, Everett. They were arrested by Patrolmen Valentine Elmere, John Twombly and John Keating of the Chelsea police at Willis street and Broadway.

Attridge and Howland were taken to East Boston District Court, where their cases on the breaking and entering and larceny charges were continued until September 22. They were held in $2,000 each.

Drew was convicted, but not sentenced, on the charge of carrying concealed weapons. He was held in $1,000 bail on this charge, and will be arraigned on the charge of breaking and entering and larceny on September 22.

WITHDRAW IN FAVOR OF GASTON, FINNERAN'S PLEA

Francis J. Finneran, president of the Democratic Club of Massachusetts, has sent an open letter to the Democratic candidates for Governor, Dettrick, Foss, Long and Monohan, in which he said:

"Calvin Coolidge, the present Governor, can be defeated on election day only by the proper candidate. Leaders and members of the rank and file of the Democratic party all over the Commonwealth consider that none of you gentlemen can win on election day and say whichever one of you in fortunate in obtaining the nomination will be defeated by over a hundred thousand votes on election day.

"The party is always considered bigger than the man and his poltical ambitions, and as our party in the past has been blessed with several individuals who have made political and financial sacrifices for its advancement, I take the liberty as a lifelong Democrat in asking you for the sake of Democracy this Fall, to withdraw from the contest in favor of Colonel William A. Gaston of Boston, the only Democrat that can defeat Calvin Coolidge on electon day.

"Hoping for the success of the party, you will sacrifice your personal ambitions this year by withdrawing from the contest and wait as a committee on Colonel Gaston and request him to be the candidate, so that we can have a Democratic Governor in 1920."

FLAG-BURNING INQUIRY IS IN PROGRESS

Newport, Sept. 18.—Official circles are disturbed over the tearing down and burning of Italian and British flags during the welcome of the crew of the Italian dreadnought Conte di Cavour.

The Italian consul has been notified and after the matter has been brought to the attention of the British consul at Providence, as was planned, it is expected that it will be turned over to the State Department.

The vandalism, which is said to have been the work of boys, took place on Thames street, where a number of the flags of the allied nations were strung. The flags in question stretched from the store of V. Sprimulli, near Dennison street, to the house of Augustus Springett, at No. 407 Thames street. They were said to have been loaned by Mr. Springett, who made a complaint to the police.

NEWTON RAISES FUND FOR ITS GUARDSMEN

Three rival candidates for representative from Newton, all members of the State Guard, left today with a company numbering 325, in command of Colonel James G. White, to go to Mechanics Building, Boston, where they will be quartered. The three are John Brimblecom, Reuben Forknall and Everett Rice. Their departure leaves the political field to the fourth rival candidate from that district, Bernard Early of Newton Lower Falls. A fund of $5,000 has been raised by older residents of Newton for the benefit of the local guardsmen. William Garcelon today notified Colonel White that the residents could be counted on for any sum up to $20,000.

GIRL HELD IN ROXBURY WINDOW SMASHING CASE

Alice Dodd, sixteen, of Centre street, was held in $500 for the grand jury in the Roxbury Court today on a charge of breaking and entering the shoe store of Samuel Rosen at No. 1080 Columbus avenue. The probation officer gave surety for the girl. The arrest followed a chase on Columbus avenue of a group of young men and women by Patrolman John A. Wragg of the Roxbury Crossing police station. It is alleged the young men smashed the window of the store and were making off with several pairs of shoes.

HELD IN $1,000 FOR HAVING REVOLVER

Charged with threatening and carrying a revolver, Thomas Vokalboski of Perch street, Roxbury, was held in Roxbury Court today in $1,000 for a hearing September 25. He is alleged to have threatened Charles Petroski with whom he lives. When searched at the police station an unloaded revolver was found in one of his pockets and cartridges in another.

Jack Gerraghty Now Boston Volunteer Traffic Officer

"Jack" Gerraghty, who startled society several years ago with his runaway match with Julia French, has joined the automobile men's traffic squad under Sergeant Bernard J. Hoppe, and does eight hours' duty daily at Dartmouth and Boylston streets.

Mr. Gerraghty, who is a salesman for the Scripps-Booth Motor Car Company, said his reason for joining the volunteer traffic men was to do his "bit" in the present crisis caused by the police strike.

He has persuaded several of his friends, also automobile men, to join, and their services have been accepted.

A hearing relating to the custody of the couple's young son, which followed Mrs. Gerraghty's petition for divorce, charging cruelty, will be held early next month in Providence.

514 HURRICANE DEAD SO FAR RECOVERED

First Refugee Trains Convey Half-Clad Victims to San Antonio

By International News Service.

San Antonio, Sept. 18.—Five hundred and fourteen bodies have been recovered in the six Texas towns which suffered the heaviest losses in Sunday's hurricane, according to figures received at army headquarters here today. The figures follow:

Portland, 60; Corpus Christi, 55; Rockport, 9; West Portland, 40; Port Arkansas and Arkansas Pass, 350.

In addition to these dispatches said 37 bodies have been counted off the bay at White Point.

Aviators returning from the devastated area report damage is appalling. Only a few houses remain standing in Arkansas Pass, a town of about 3,000 persons. Planes will attempt to drop canned food there today.

Reports reached here today that military guards had shot seven persons, who were caught looting bodies of the victims.

Among those who perished in Corpus Christi was U. S. Deputy Marshal George Pierce and his wife and two children.

First refugees reached San Antoino today on special trains. The first train brought 175 and was followed two hours later with another bringing 200 men, women and children. Both trains came from the Corpus Christi section and the refugees said the total loss of life there would be between 400 and 500.

All the arrivals had harrowing tales of hardships and suffering to relate. Some of the women had no stockings when they arrived here. Very few had hats or other head covering. One woman was clad in a pair of overalls, given her by a railroad man as she was leaving Corpus Christi.

Another woman held her skirt up with a towel and several girls in their 'teens were barefooted. The girls said they threw away their shoes after wearing them three days in the water.

Military police, Red Cross workers and citizens met the trains and hurried the refugees to the principal hotels, which have been thrown open to all persons who need help. Cots have been put in hallways and meals will be provided.

Red Cross to Handle New England Relief for Texas Sufferers

Victims of the Texas tidal wave will receive relief from Boston through the Red Cross. The organization, at the request of Governor Coolidge, has opened a fund to be called "The American Red Cross Corpus Christi Relief." Checks should be mailed to the New England Division headquarters, No. 108 Massachusetts avenue.

SHOE TRADES CLUB COMMENDS GOVERNOR

Hearty commendation of Governor Coolidge in his stand concerning the police strike, was conveyed in a telegram today from the Boston Shoe Trades Club. The message, signed by E. B. Terhune, president of the club, reads: "The 2,200 members of the Boston Shoe Trades Club are with you heart and soul to a man, in the splendid stand you are taking to uphold the honor and integrity of our State and city. To fail would be a national calamity. To win will be an honorable victory."

CHAUFFEUR INJURED IN CRASH OF CARS

B. K. Baker, a chauffeur, was injured when the limousine he was driving collided with the touring car of Dr. J. T. Sparling of No. 144 Huntington avenue at Commonwealth avenue and Exeter street, Back Bay, early today. The limousine is owned by F. B. Sweitser of No. 50 Congress street. Neither Mr. Sweitser nor Dr. Sparling were hurt, but both machines were damaged. Dr. Sparling was crossing Commonwealth avenue at Exeter street when the limousine coming down Commonwealth avenue struck his car broadside and carried it to the sidewalk.

Peter Ross of Milford Dead

Milford, Sept. 18.—Peter Ross, many years a resident here and prominent in the granite industry, died suddenly of apoplexy aged 72 years.

HEAVY DAMAGE INFLICTED BY FROST

Middlesex County Gardeners Suffer Severely in Late Crops

Damage estimated at thousands of dollars was done in Middlesex County to the late crops of the farmers and market gardeners by the first frost of the season. The frost was very heavy, and even the unripe fruit itself in many sections was badly frozen.

The temperature dropped to 32 degrees in the centre of Lexington, and in outlying districts temperature readings as low as 25 degrees were reported. Only vegetables on the high land escaped the killing frosts.

Especially is the tomato crop hard hit. This crop is later than usual in this section, and many farmers had acres of tomato plants still heavily laden with green fruit. Some of the orchards also suffered, although the fruit high up in the trees escaped most of the killing effects of the frost, which, as usual, hung low.

This frost came considerably later than the first frost a year ago, which occurred on September 11. Lexington and other sections of the county were visited on June 23 with a record late Spring frost, which killed many of the crops, and from that date to the first Fall frost has been less than three months in which crops could be grown without being frozen, making a very short season.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE POLICE STRIKE

Although the city still labors under a feeling of restlessness, everywhere are heard comments on the able manner in which street traffic is being directed. Here and there one comes upon a traffic director or guard who tops his fellow workers. One of this type is stationed as director at Summer street near Otis, and the way he handles traffic makes one imagine just how he handled his bayonet on the other side.

* * *

Even pulchritude, unless backed up by authority, has to keep moving these days. It happened on Tremont street and he was talking to Her. The guard could not show his chivalry as he was under orders. "Please move along," he requested, but he of the male gentry quietly flashed his badge. Moral: If a girl wishes to talk to a friend on Tremont street she had better pick out one with a badge.

* * *

Some of the striking policemen are beginning to feel the pinch. This is especially true of those with large families. One striker who has eight children has applied for a position in a garage. Several others have sought employment in garages, but as far as known they were not hired.

* * *

Scollay square is one of the places that timid women still avoid as they fear that disorder will break out afresh. When going to Beacon street those coming along Washington avoid Hanover and go up School.

* * *

"Yes, we are proud of our splendid record," said a resident of Charlestown. "Here there was a lack of turmoil during the crisis, but look to some of the higher-rented districts. Prohibition has helped."

* * *

One of the pathetic things brought out by the strike is the missing of the former mounted officers by their horses. These animals have an understanding which makes them in many cases to be preferred over automobiles. A meeting between one of these and his former master was tragic. As the former officer approached, the horse became all attention, pricking up his ears and whinnying. After a few more words of cheer the former officer went on his way to work for his cause.

* * *

Posting the guard provides a parade while it lasts. Now and then an especially upstanding group goes by and it gives the people something to talk about. A floating bargeful of guardsmen reeled by Commissioner Crowley's house in Dorchester the other day, and some of the youngsters gathered on the street laughed at the gear joy ride. One of them yelled out, "What speed are you in now?" The lieutenant in charge refused to tell the rate.

AUTOISTS FINED FOR CITY POINT SPEEDING

Charged with speeding, three motorists were arraigned today before Judge Edward L. Logan in the South Boston District Court. Roger E. Frey of Front street, Weymouth, and Hobart W. Troop of Grant avenue, Medford, were each fined $10. Thomas A. Lyons of 22 Butler road, South Braintree, pleaded extenuating circumstances and was placed on probation. The men were arrested on the Strandway, City Point.

LEXINGTON MAN IS COLLEGE PROFESSOR

Lexington, Sept. 18. — George E. Washburn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abram C. Washburn of No. 36 Forest street, has accepted the assistant professorship in the modern language department at the Pennsylvania State College. He assumed his duties this week.

DE VALERA SAYS ENGLAND TRIES TO DESTROY IRELAND AS NATION

ASSAILS POSITION TAKEN BY LLOYD GEORGE

IS IRELAND A NATION AT ALL?

By EAMON DE VALERA,
President of the Irish Republic.

The last article was to enable the reader to decide for himself whether the Irish nation was a small nation. Perhaps it may be asked, is the Irish nation a nation at all?

Eamon De Valera.

This is what Mr. Asquith, when Prime Minister of England, said on the point a few years ago:

"There are few cases in history—as a student of history I myself know of none—of a nationhood at once so distinct, so persistent and so assimilative as the Irish. . . . I start then with the proposition that Ireland is a nation."

And again:

"I have always maintained, and I maintain as strongly today that . . . Ireland is a nation. Not two nations, but one nation."

Concluding:

"The condition of the success of any scheme (for settling the Irish question) that statesmen can devise is the recognition, the full and generous recognition of Irish nationality."

This Mr. Asquith. But it is only the other day that I saw it reported in the New York papers that England's present Prime Minister—but one time Mr. Asquith's official subordinate and political follower—Mr. Lloyd George, informed the world that Ireland was not a nation, nor two nations even, but three nations.

Well, there is luck in odd numbers—but I wonder how many nations would Mr. Lloyd George have made out of the United States? You have the Democratic Party, the Republican Party, and the Socialist Party, and further parties, and parties to be, I am told. From the number at which Mr. Lloyd George has arrived in the case of Ireland, it is clear that to him every political party in a country constitutes in itself a nation, and so at the moment the number of nations in America is indeterminate. We must wait for the elections to make out how many there are.

What Is a Nation?

I have seen many attempts at an exact definition of what constitutes a nation, but nobody hitherto seems to have dreamt of Mr. Lloyd George's wondrously simple and convenient one—"a political party." What can the metaphysicians and all the other philosophers have been doing, I wonder, all this time that they did not make this discovery until Mr. Lloyd George made it for them.

Now, I am not going to trouble you will definitions. It is not that I fear that Ireland's case would suffer by metaphysical treatment, but because I believe that it is not the best way to get one to recognize a horse to give him the zoological specification of a horse, and because I believe that the average American is not interested in questions of the order of how many of his customary characteristics should a horse, say, be shorn in order that he should just cease to be entitled to be called a horse; whether he would still be a horse if he had lost his ears or his tail?

It is not with mtaphysical niceties that we have to deal. It is with the fact that there is an island in the Atlantic Ocean, and that the vast majority of those who are born in that island have the consciousness that that island is their home, and that all who dwell in the island constitute a special group set apart from the rest of mankind.

They are conscious that they have all a certain peculiar community of sentiment; that they have as a group certain well defined characteristics which are common to no other group of individuals anywhere else.

They all respond to the name "Irish," and they know the special characteristics they have in common as Irish characteristics.

It is not what Mr. Lloyd George, or what any other quabbler, may say that matters. It is the fact that the people of the island themselves are conscious that they are a nation that matters. Rightly or wrongly, they have decided that they are a nation, and the world has decided also. Neither was it today nor yesterday that the decision was arrived at.

No one disputes the application of the term "nation" to certain entities in Europe. I have no doubt if Mr. Lloyd George had any interest in doing so he would dispute it. Long before any of these entities had taken definite and conscious form as nations, Ireland was recognized as such by all civilized groups in Europe—recognized as a separate and distinct nation, with a well-developed unity of political and social organization—a definite entity it was, and is today.

In its geographical boundaries, in its history and traditions, in the mental characteristics of its people, in language, culture, polity, social custom, and in the other attributes commonly accepted as indicating separate nationhood. If Ireland is not a nation, America certainly is not a nation—no nation is a nation.

Moreover, for over a thousand years, her nationhood was crowned with the procession and exercise of sovereign independence. For this thousand years she was a fully recognized nation-state, evolving and developing her own political system, her own culture, her own literature. Within her clearly-defined territory a distinctive civilization found expression in a unified system of law, in a common language and literature, in music, art and architecture, all distinctive and peculiar to herself, though worked out, not in barbarous isolation, but in close relation to the traditional culture of Latin Europe.

At this time when Ireland's political, social and economic thought was far in advance of anything known in Europe, she gave continuously of the spiritual and cultural fruits of this civilization to the peoples of western and central Europe emerging from the fall of the Roman Empire, and because of these gifts her name as a nation was famous throughout all these wide regions.

Those who hailed from that island were revered as citizens of a great state—a state that down even to the fifteenth century took precedence of all next to Rome and Byzantium.

Ireland has indeed lost her sovereign statehood by the violence and fraud of the usurping power of England, but she has never lost the continuity of consciousness, of distinctive national individuality that has remained ever present in the minds of the great mass of her people.

The Danes came and were assimilated. The Normans came, and, with the exception of a small fringe, mainly about Dublin, that spoke of the rest of the people of the island as the Irish enemy, were assimilated and became "more Irish than the Irish themselves." Even in the fifteenth century this fringe, called the Pale, could scarcely be said to exist.

England tried hard to destroy this national continuity. At times by wile, at other times, as the writer put it, she tried to tear the nation out by the roots. She sent in swarm after swarm of planters and settlers. She tried device after device to keep them divorced from the main body of the people by whom they were being continually assimilated.

England has failed. The great contest in Ireland has been this: England has fought fiercely and persistently to annihilate Ireland as a distinct nation. She sent over her colonists, hoping to make the island a West Britain. Her colonists became Irishmen. Where is the Dublin Pale today? Go ask the Orangeman of Northeast Ulster is he an Irishman or not?

Despite all England's efforts at annihilation, despite all England's efforts at sowing the seeds of division, we have maintained in Ireland that national unity—that national claim to individual existence—which not even modern France or modern Spain can surpass. That unity, and that claim, maintained through centuries of torture endured because we would not relinquish them, is something that the mightiest of sovereign states might be proud of.

The nationhood of Ireland is, without question, a fact set before the other nations of the world today, and a historical reality rooted deep in both the past record of our people, and in the land which has always been their motherland.

SINN FEIN LOAN THRIVES ON OPPOSITION

Cork "Examiner" Suppressed by British in Campaign Against Irish Republic

Cork, Sept 18.—The government is doing everything possible to suppress the Sinn Fein loan. But Irish Republicans inform me that with each government outburst money rolls in.

All advertising is prohibited, and the Cork Examiner, one of the most influential journals, was suppressed, large forces of police and military closing the shop and dismantling the printing premises. The publication will be stopped for two days because of the insertion of a loan advertisement in the paper.

Cork is expected to subscribe twice its quota to the loan.

William Pedlar, the American citizen arrested near Dublin, will be deported to America. He is accused of having taken part in the Easter rebellion of 1916 and of being a member of the Philadelphia branch of the "Clan-na-Gael."

The Cork "Examiner" is the first daily newspaper to be suppressed since the 1916 revolt. All of the twelve members of the paper's staff served throughout the war and supported the late John Redmond's policies.

The ceremony took place in King's Chapel, and the Rev. Howard N. Brown, minister of the church, officiated. Only members of the immediate families were present.

The couple are making a six-weeks' automobile tour through the country, after which they will reside in Chicago, the bride having left the stage.

Do You Know Good Clothes Are Scarce?

Men of the United States this Fall will not be able to find enough clothes—good clothes—to go 'round. Reliable woolens are too scarce. Skilled tailors too few. Production is far behind demand—will be for months to come. In such a situation is it likely every clothes maker will be "fussy" on the subject of quality? When he can turn out his product about as he pleases and still find a ready market for it, is it likely?

Perhaps you have never before inquired about the origin of your clothes—never before thought it necessary. Well, today it is the most necessary step in buying a suit of clothes—to find out about the house which made it. Is it a house which aims to make clothes better—or merely to make them faster? Is it a house with the moral courage to shut its eyes to unfilled orders, but to keep them wide open in maintaining standards? Is it a house with a long, clear, steady record for quality? Is it a house you can trust?

VON TIRPITZ DECLARES GERMANY LACKED GREAT MEN IN CRISIS

ADMIRAL ARRAIGNS KAISER AND BETHMANN-HOLLWEG

VON TIRPITZ MEMOIRS

By ADMIRAL VON TIRPITZ,
Grand Admiral of the German Navy.

When one thinks that there were those who called Bethmann-Hollweg an "Iron Chancellor," and recalls the indomitable being who moulded the destinies of Germany in the early days of the Empire, one is filled with woe at the realization that in her hour of direst need Germany lacked such men.

Men cannot live forever, but had the Kaiser not estranged Bismarck, his policies might have endured and he might have left men of his own school to stand by the Emperor and the nation in their crisis. Efforts were made to eradicate the misunderstanding which had arisen between these two men, but they came too late.

In June, 1897, I suggested to the Kaiser that the next ship to be launched should be given the name of Graf Bismarck. I knew that the former chancellor and his family labored under the entirely erroneous impression that the ship bearing his name had been intentionally stricken from the list at the time of his resignation.

(This charge had been made two years before by the Hamburger Nachrichten, Bismarck's chief press supporter. He frequently wrote articles on State affairs for the paper.—Editor's Note.)

By this means I hoped to narrow the breach between Bismarck and the government, and I wanted personally to go to Friedrichsruh (Frederick's Rest, Bismarck's favorite country place near Hamburg) and deliver to him the invitation to christen the ship which was to bear his name. Incidentally I saw an opportunity to win the fallen chancellor's blessing for the naval bill.

(The naval bill was the question of the day in Germany at that time. Although Bismarck still held his seat in the Reichstag, he seldom entered political controversies. The Clericals and Socialists opposed the naval bill and to combat them von Tirpitz shrewdly attempted to enlist the former chancellor's aid. His wide popularity had been shown shortly before when the German people made him a gift of more than $1,000,000. Editor's Note.)

The Emperor agreed, but later, before I had made my visit, sent Bismarck an official letter inviting him to launch a ship, the name for which he did not disclose. His purpose was by a graceful act to increase the pleasure of the by adding to it the element of surprise when he should learn that the ship he was to christen bore his own name. Such kindly acts were characteristic of the Emperor.

Bismarck, ignorant of the honor which was to be done him, replied that he was too old for such things. Then I received the command to straighten out the situation which innocently enough had gotten into a pretty muddle.

A VISIT TO "IRON CHANCELLOR."

When I entered his house the family were already at the table. The prince was sitting at the end. He rose, his manner cold but polite, and looking very much the grand seigneur, remained standing until I was seated. He was tormented by violent neuralgic pains and kept holding to his cheek India rubber bottles filled with hot water. He ate scraped meat and only spoke with the greatest difficulty.

After drinking a bottle and a half of champagne he became more lively. When the simple meal was finished, the Countess Wilhelm Bismarck (the wife of his younger son) lit his long pipe for him and left the room.

The atmosphere was sultry. Suddenly the prince's great eyebrows contracted. He gave me an annihilating look, and growled:

"I am no tomcat that gives off sparks when it is stroked."

I am not generally very ready with my tongue, but I could not remain silent in the face of these desperate prospects, so I replied:

"So far as I know, those are only black cats, Your Highness."

Count Kuno Rantzau (Bismarck's son-in-law and a distant relative of the present Count Brockdorff-Rantzau) put in eagerly:

"The Admiral is right. Only black cats do that."

The atmosphere became less electric. I delivered my message and Bismarck replied that he could not go to Kiel and put on his uniform and spurs, ending with the words, "I do not wish to appear before the public as a ruin."

DRANK BEER IN CARRIAGE.

After we had been sitting at the table about two hours he asked me to go for a ride with him through Sachsenwald (Saxon Forest, a beautiful tract of woodland on Bismarck's Lauenberg estates). He never rested in the afternoon. The carriage in which we rode was loaded with big bottles of beer piled to the right and left of us. The Prince continually opened and drank them, but I found it hard to keep pace with his iron constitution.

So that he could speak freely in the presence of the coachman, the prince did not use German and because his nature combined delicacy with forcefulness, and because he knew me to be familiar with it, he chose English as the best medium. He spoke the language excellently.

He was unsparing in his criticism of the Emperor, but did not mind my taking exception to his strong expressions, for he realized that as an officer I must take the Emperor's side.

Twice after this I visited the aged prince. The last time was with the Emperor who announced himself with his whole suite rather suddenly in Friedrichsruh just after the ceremonial departure of Prince Henry for Tsing-tao.

(Tsing-tao or Kaiao-chow, is one of the principal seaports of the Shantung peninsula. The port and adjoining territory was demanded and taken by Germany in November, 1897, in retaliation for the murder of two German missionaries by Chinese bandits. Prince Henry, at the head of the Second Fleet, was sent over to take formal possession. In one of his "godspeed" speeches to Prince Henry, the Kaiser coined his "mailed fist" euphemism which swept Europe. Editor's note.)

Bismarck received the Emperor in his wheel chair at the modest entrance to his country home. We went straight to the table, where Bismarck seated himself painfully, and with some assistance. He appeared to be completely fagged by the effort, but after he had been sitting for some time he livened up again.

My place was diagonally opposite the old prince and I had at my side Von Moltke, the future general.

TALKED ONLY TRIVIALITIES.

Bismarck tried to engage the Emperor in conversation on our political relations with France, but much to my disappointment the Kaiser did not follow up these openings. Instead, he talked of nothing but anecdotes, a habit quite usual at the Imperial table. Whenever Bismarck attempted to switch the talk around to politics, the Emperor ignored it.

Von Moltke whispered to me, "It is terrible." We felt that here was a brutal lack of reverence for such a man. Then Bismarck uttered a few words, the prophetic weight of which impressed them indelibly on our minds:

"Your Majesty, as long as you have such an officers' corps you can do everything you want. When you no longer have them, things will be quite different."

The apparent nonchalance with which this came out, as if there were nothing in it at all, showed an extraordinary presence of mind. It revealed the master. One could not mistake the reproof which it expressed for the inconsequential nature of the Emperor.

GERMANY DEPRESSED.

How often in the first months of the war I longed for a leader such as this old man had been, whose crumbling body could not dim or fetter his mind. Instead of the iron men of 1870 we had weakness—weakness on every side. When we should have acted, we were still; and when we should have waited we rushed precipitately. To show the state we were in when our plans, originally designed to crush our enemies in a matter of weeks, went awry, I cannot do better than to quote from a letter to my wife written in October, 1914. I was then at Grand Headquarters, Charleville.

LETTER TO HIS WIFE.

"A WAVE OF DEPRESSION IS PASSING OVER ALL OF GERMANY. Here things go neither forward or backward and even time is against us. Even in the East we are not meeting with the real success we should; we are not attaining our aims. Even the neutrals are against us. THE GIGANTIC HOPES OF AUGUST HAVE FLOWN. The Kaiser and Bethmann-Hollweg are not holding out well. They have not the force nor the will. The Kaiser, forsooth, seems to have given the Chancellor permission to go begging.

"I am of no earthly use whatever here. I had much better be with the fleet. I have not seen the Kaiser since I have been here. How can the end be good after such a start.

"This war is really the wildest insanity in which the white races have ever engaged. We are exterminating each other on the continent in order that England may reap the profits. Moreover, this same perfidious Albion, which has earned the name through centuries, is ready to indict us before the whole world as the guilty party.

"One almost loses one's faith in goodness. Of course we are not entirely without blame, but that is the fault of our leaders. Their braggadocio was always sickening and especially hateful to me. And the wrong of it all is that Capelle quite rightly wrote me recently that I am now counted among the Chauvinists and Jingoes."

(Admiral Edward Capelle was at this time director of operations of the German Naval General Staff. Editor's note.)

"Today I had a long letter from Ballin. He is working hard for a better understanding with England. Meanwhile we should be striking England with every ounce of our power at sea. We have let ourselves be surprised. If things go on thus at sea, our forces will soon be wiped out and the English will enclose us in a circle of mines. Then out fleet will be bottled."

(This is in strange contrast to the boastfulness which von Tirpitz usually displays in referring to Germany's sea power. In the middle of 1918 his prediction was practically realized. With the assistance of the American mine laying squadron the ring of mines was completed in the North Sea. Editor's note.)

BALLIN'S DEMANDS.

"Ballin demands of me that I attempt to come to some sort of a naval agreement with Churchill (at that time First Lord of the British Admiralty). In other words, he wants us to abandon our independent attitude toward England and become a vassal state, after the French pattern. If our Liebe Herr Gott doesn't make a special intercession it may come to that. The ground is preparing for this new departure and I am playing the role of the wicked scoundrel of the war.

"The Kaiser is against the use of submarines and some of his advisers are afraid that they would give Italy a pretext to war on us. I am convinced that by not using them we are only frittering away the sympathy of neutrals. When we do not strike they lose their respect for us. We must show them our strength.

"But, above all, instead of talking of coming to an agreemnt with her, we must get our knife into the English."

Allied War Council Seeks Extradition of Ex-Kaiser

By Universal Service.
(Special Cable Dispatch.)

London, Sept. 13.—The Allied War Council, the Pall Mall Gazette learns, has decided to ask Holland for the extradition of Ex-Kaiser Wilhelm.

"The Dutch will receive, if they have not already received, a formal demand," says the paper, "and although a protest from them is possible, officials are confident Holland will accede."

The Central News says there is no confirmation of the above report. It adds that Premier Lloyd George pressed the Supreme Council for a demand of extradition and was supported in it by Premier Clemenceau, but that no steps were actually taken with a view to making the extradition an accomplished fact.

CLAIMS ENTENTE IS THROTTLING GERMANY

Finance Minister Says "Hole in West" Will Drive Nation Into Bankruptcy

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND.
Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.
(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Berlin, Sept. 13.—"The entente is doing everything or permitting everything to be done to drive Germany into financial ruin. If it continues in this policy there will be nothing left for me to do but to declare Germany incapable of meeting her obligations."

Dr. Mathias Erzberger, Vice-Premier and Minister of Finance, and incidentally the most attacked man in Germany, threw out his hands and turned up his palms in an eloquent gesture portraying his feelings as he made the above statement to me in his office.

"In what way is the Entente driving Germany toward ruin?" I asked.

IMPORT DUTIES CUT OFF.

"By refusing to recognize our law that import duties must be collected on a gold basis," he replied. "They declare this law does not apply to the occupied territory and thus make it practically impossible for me to raise any revenue from import duty.

"That has been one of the chief factors in the rapid drop of the German mark. Approximately 4,000,000,000 ($1,000,000,000) in imports are going to the occupied district either duty free or on a duty-paper basis.

"Goods have been shoved across the occupied districts into Germany's interior through Mayence and Cologne, and we are unable to prevent it, as the English and French refuse to recognize our law providing for collection on a gold basis.

BIG PORTS SUFFER.

"The result is that imports through Hamburg and Bremen are ceasing and everything is routed via the occupied territory. That will be understood when I tell you that the import duty at Hamburg and Bremen, on a gold basis, is almost four times higher than on the paper basis through the areas occupied by the French and British."

Dr. Erzberger referred to a number of men whom I had met coming out of his office. "That's a delegation from the Hamburg Chamber of Commerce, the Economic Trade Council, and the Workingmen's Council. They came here to tell me that Hamburg and Bremen are being ruined by the 'hole in the west,' as all imports through those ports are ceasing and they demand that something be done.

HIS PROTEST IGNORED.

"I have protested to the Entente, but my protest was not even acknowledged."

The German Vice Premier then quoted English newspapers as saying that at the present moment between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000 worth of British goods were at Cologne awaiting shipment into Germany's interior. He said he had numerous reports of entire carload lots being let through the British lines from Cologne by the payment of 10,000 marks.

He declared that for Germany to meet her external and internal obligations it was necessary to raise revenue from every possible source, and that import duty was one of those sources.

"The hole in the West has been one of the worst holes in Germany's finances," said he.

ENTENTE IS BLAMED.

"Instead of helping us to stabilize our finances in their own interest, the entente powers not only refuse to recognize a law which the German government considers essential to raise revenue and meet its obligations, but they permit such things as those I have told you about, which tend to undermine our financial stability."

But for this situation, Erzberger said, he would be far from pessimistic as to Germany's ability, with some outside help, to get on her financial feet again. He admitted the "hole in the West" would be stopped up with the ratification of the peace treaty, but he asserted at present both the French and British were insisting that German territory was to be regarded under the terms of the armistice, not of the peace treaty.

NO SMUGGLING AT COBLENZ.

There were few complaints about smuggling from Coblenz, the gateway of the American sector,' he said, as no American goods were coming that way, and the French and English were naturally shipping through their respective occupied districts. I then asked Erzberger:

"What is the truth about the reports from Hamburg that British firms in London have given big German importers to understand if they do not want to do business with North and South America through London they, the British, will endeavor to prevent the Germans from getting credit in New York and elsewhere'" he replied:

"These reports are true, in fact, they are official."

"What has been done about it?" I queried.

NEEDS $100,000,000 LOAN.

"We refuse to be blackmailed," he answered sharply. "We should be greatly surprised if America would stand for such tactics. Germany wants to do business with everybody on a straight and honorable basis, in fair competition."

The minister then discussed the necessity of a loan to prevent the financial collapse of Germany. He said:

"Give me a loan of $100,000,000 and I will quickly bring up the exchange rate in Germany."

Were such a thing possible that the American government would decide to return the 800,000,000 marks worth of private property of German citizens seized by the United States Allen Property Custodian, Erzberger declared that measures would be taken to use that money in America and secure credits to Germany, but he seemed to have little hope on that score.

JARS BRITAIN AND FRANCE.

"One thing should be clear to all," he asserted with emphasis. "If Germany is allowed to come to a point where she cannot meet her obligations, France and Britain will reach that point also.

"With 25,000,000,000 francs sunk in chaotic Russia, France's hope for financial salvation lies in what she expects to get out of Germany. If we cannot pay she gets nothing."

I asked Dr. Erzberger what he thought of the demand of the French finance minister, M. Klotz, for 375,000,000 francs indemnity or reparation.

The minister smiled sadly. "I have refused to answer that for the present, and I shall continue to do so. In view of the situation, it will serve no good purpose to enter into a discussion of his demands."

Like nearly every leading banker and industrialist and authoritative person, Erzberger pins his hope for Germany's solvency largely upon credits and loans from America.

He denied most emphatically all reports that he was contemplating retirement.

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

CHILDREN WILL AID IN REVERE VAUDEVILLE

Three clever children are among the performers who will entertain Revere Post, No. 61, American Legion, at its vaudeville show tonight in Revere City Hall as the closing feature of the membership drive launched Tuesday.

The trio of talented little girls are all well known for their skilful dancing and elocution. Jane and Ruth Foley are two of the trio who will aid the other performers in making the entertainment a success. Agnes L. Brogi, who is only four years old, is the other little actress.

Following the show a dance will be held and several features have been arranged to assure its success.

A speaker will be selected from among the members of the post who has won hero honors in the war, and prior to the dancing he will detail the progress of the campaign which had been carefully planned for the purpose of enlisting every soldier in Revere.

SHORT WORKOUT FOR ARMY FOOTBALLERS

West Point, Sept. 18.—The army squad had a short workout. Owing to academic work, only a few players were on the field before late in the afternoon. Teams were started scrimmaging without any preliminary work. This was frequently interrupted by coaches correcting players and plays. Many men were used in order to determine the lineups of the various teams, which at the present are constantly changing. During both the scrimmages Saturday and today men were changed from the fourth team to the first and vice versa. Also many men are being played at halfback, end and quarterback to see what position they can best fill.

Shabacker, Torry, Lystad, George, Gregory and McQuarrie were all used behind the line today. Kelley showed up well as a centre. He passes well for a beginner, and looks like the one for the position.

CHINAMAN FELLED BY HIGHWAYMAN'S BLOW

Lawrence, Sept. 18.—A bold attempt at highway robbery was frustrated on Amesbury street, near Essex, when Chin Song, proprietor of a Chinese laundry at No. 417 Common street was hit over the head with a blunt implement and felled in the crowded thoroughfare.

The assailant whom the police allege committed the deed was booked as Michael Rea, alias John Adams, of No. 450 Broadway. It is stated that Rea dashed through the alleyway leading from Amesbury street, near Essex, after attempting to rob Song, who had some money and other valuables on his person. Several men joined in the chase after Rea, who was rounded up in the alley by Officers Daniel Dwyer and John Dinson.

AMERICANS ARE READY TO END PEACE WORK

Paris, Sept. 17.—The American and British peace delegations are at odds over the question whether it is necessary to prolong the sessions of the peace conference.

American peace officials hold the view that the seriousness of the situation in Central Europe is underestimated by the British, who are apparently willing to adopt a Micawber-like attitude, hoping the course of events in Hungary and Rumania will justify the policy of watchful waiting.

The Americans, on the other hand, insist that the Bulgarian and Hungarian treaties must be handed over at the earliest possible moment if anarchy throughout central Europe is to be avoided.

Bulgaria's peace delegates have been waiting here since June for the treaty which the dilatory tactics of the British have been holding up.

Frank Polk denied a report published in the British press to the effect that the Supreme Council of the peace conference at its meeting Monday approved the British policy of evacuating Russia. Mr. Polk declares that Russia was mentioned only incidentally, and that it was "absolutely untrue" that any definite attitude toward the Russian question had been adopted.

Canada Buys Battle Sites at Ypres and Vimy Ridge

London, Sept. 18.—The Canadian government is arranging for immediate purchase of plots of land on Vimy Ridge, in the Ypres salient, at Passchendale, Cambrai, Courcelette and all the sites of the battles where the Canadian army distinguished itself.

Ground at Vimy Ridge and elsewhere has already been given by the French government, but other plots will be purchased from the government and the peasant owners, so as to ensure for Canadian pilgrims for all time a real memento of the conditions under which the Canadians fought from the early part of 1915.

The battlefields mentioned have lately been visited by W. L. Mackenzie King, Minister of Labor in the last Liberal government of Canada, and a report by him on the project is the basis of the present negotiations.

The accident occurred at Talbot avenue and Norfolk street. Casey was on his way to report for duty at Station 11 when the accident happened.

La-May Face Powder Is Harmless to the Most Delicate Skin

A specialist has at last perfected a pure face powder that positively will not cause enlarged pores, blackheads and irritations. In fact, while it is considered the best face powder, it is also a remedy for complexion troubles. It is guaranteed pure and harmless to the most delicate baby skin. It beautifies wonderfully because it helps to clear and lighten the skin and protect the complexion from blemishes. This new kind of face powder is made largely of an ingredient that skin specialists use in the treatment of the complexion. And it really stays on better than any other face powder. Of course, saying this, every one knows we mean the famous La-may Powder (French, Poudre L'Ame). This is the powder that does not contain starch, rice powder or dangerous white lead to make it adhere. White lead is a deadly poison and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that makes enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder irritations. Because La-may is so pure and because it stays on so well it is now used by over a million American women. All dealers carry the large box, and many dealers also carry the small trial size. Be sure to try La-may. Then you will really know a perfect face powder. You will be sorry if you take a substitute. When you use this harmless powder and see how beautifully it improves your complexion, you will understand why La-may so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in America. Save this notice.

ANTIS AIM AT WORLD-WIDE PROHIBITION

Success of "Dry" United States Depends on Such Move, They Say

By Universal Service.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—The success of prohibition in the United States depends upon world-wide prohibition, according to leaders of the Anti-Saloon League of America, which has opened a two-day conference here.

More than 200 delegates, representing nearly every State and consisting of superintendents, members of executive committees and field workers composed the conference.

The conference is being held, it was explained, to broaden the Anti-saloon League of America so that it will include the whole world. The most important business today consisted of formulating a budget and financial program for making prohibition a world-wide movement.

Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League against alcohol, said when finances were arranged the organization would prosecute a co-operative prohibition campaign on foreign lands. He said it was expected to launch the campaign not later than January 16, 1920. He said there are already fifteen other prohibition organizations in as many different countries of the world, and the American organization will co-operate with them.

GARY ALONE CAN STOP STEEL STRIKE

Order for Walkout on Sept. 22 Stands, Declare Union Officials

be no violence. The American Federation of Labor has won all its great progress by peaceful and legal methods.

"Iron and Steel Workers! A historic decision confronts us. If we will but stand together now like men, our demands will soon be granted and a golden era of prosperity will open for us in the steel industry.

"But if we falter and fail to act, this great effort will be lost, and we will sink back into a miserable and hopeless serfdom. The welfare of our wives and children is at stake. Now is the time to insist upon our rights as human beings.

"STOP WORK SEPTEMBER 22.
"NATIONAL COMMITTEE FOR ORGANIZING IRON AND STEEL WORKERS."

SPECIAL POLICE SWORN IN.

Anticipating the walkout on Monday, Mayor George H. Lysle, of McKeesport, today ordered that the sale of firearms in the city be discontinued.

Special policemen were sworn in today, and a vigilance body composed of business men and other citizens was organized. A numer of returned soldiers, sailors and marines joined the organization. Approximately 20,000 steel men are employed in the steel mills in McKeesport.

Other towns throughout the Pittsburgh district have organized their citizens into vigilance committees. Organizers claim that 75 per cent of the men, mostly foreigners, are members of the union.

REPLY TO JUDGE GARY.

An official statement, signed by Chairman John J. Fitzpatrick and three other committeemen, in answer to Judge Gary's letter of yesterday, was given out today. It reads as follows:

"In his letter of September 16 to the presidents of the subsidiary companies of the United States Steel Corporation, Judge Gary avers that he had two reasons in mind when he refused to meet with the American Federation of Labor committee, which called upon him recently requesting a conference for the purpose of presenting grievances of his employees.

"First, he did not believe that the committee was authorized to speak for large numbers of the employes.

"Second, a conference with the committee would have been treated by them as a recognition of the 'closed shop' method of employment.

"If these are the real reasons actuating Judge Gary, surely they are not sufficient to plunge the industry into a great labor conflict. Judge Gary presents a false premise and then declares that he will stand or fall on this false ground.

"The committee that waited upon Judge Gary were the selected representatives of the employes. And they requested a conference for the purpose of establishing the principle of collective bargaining and some practical method of redressing grievances.

"Judge Gary denied their authority to represent the employes and refused to meet them in conference. The only way left for the employes to convince Judge Gary that the committee does represent the great body of the employes of the United States Steel Corporation is to cease work until the corporation agrees to meet their representatives in conference. This the employes have decided to do on Monday morning, September 22.

"It is unfortunate that the employes are compelled to resort to a strike in order to prove the authority of their selected representatives to present their grievances. But, as there is no other way, the proof, in the form of a strike, will effectually remove all doubt in Judge Gary's mind.

"In the second place, Judge Gary sets up the question of the 'closed shop,' which has absolutely no basis whatsoever in the present controversy. It is simply dragged in here by Judge Gary as a bugaboo to becloud the real issue.

"There is one and only one question at issue, and that is the question of a conference. The employes have exhausted every avenue of approach to the corporation, for the purpose of securing a conference, and every avenue has been closed to them. Their last and only hope is to strike, and now the employes declare that they will cease work on next Monday morning until such time as the corporation will meet their rpresentatives in conference for the purpose of establishing humane and reasonable methods of dealing with the very vital problems which affect their lives, their homes and their future."

Chicago Steel Workers' Unions Reported Voting Against Strike Proposal

By International News Service.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—Union Steel workers in the Chicago district are reported voting against the strike of Steel workers, set for Monday, according to what is considered reliable information from within the Illinois Steel Company plant at South Chicago today. Steel Mill owners and Union Leaders are assembling their forces for the strike, which will call out 150,000 steel workers in the Chicago district.

Union Leaders report that their men are behind them and ready to "fight to a finish" and have called several meetings to be held between now and Monday to solidify the spirit of the Iron and Steel workers. In the meantime word was received here that in the machine shops at the Illinois Steel company plant 181 workers voted against the strike, 71 in favor of it, with 80 refusing to vote.

Two of the plate mills, at the Illinois Steel company plant, also had informal ballots. While the exact figures on this vote could not be learned today, it was stated that seventy percent of the workers had voted against the strike.

Gary's Letter Refusing to Yield to Unions

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 18.—The text of the letter sent to presidents of subsidiary companies by Judge Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, reiterating his intention to fight for the open shop and refusing to deal with the steel unions, follows:

"Not long ago I respectfully declined to meet for the purpose of discussing matters pertaining to labor at our various plants a number of gentlemen, representing certain labor unions. They claim this furnishes cause for complaint and have stated that they intend, if possible, to prevent a continuance of operations at our mills and factories.

"I deem it proper to repeat in a letter which heretofore has been said to you verbally. I entertain no feeling of animosity towards these gentlemen personally and would not hesitate to meet them as individuals; but I did not and do not consider it proper to confer with them under the circumstances.

NO QUARREL WITH UNION.

"The declination was made for two reasons: First, because I did not believe the gentlemen were authorized to speak for large numbers of our employes, whose interests are of prime importance; secondly, because a conference with these men would have been treated by them as a recognition of the 'closed shop' method of employment. We do not combat labor unions as such. We do not negotiate with labor unions, because it would indicate the closing of our shops against non-union labor; and large numbers o' our workmen are not members of unions and do not care to be.

"The principle of 'open shop' is vital to the greatest industrial progress and prosperity. It is of equal benefit to employer and employe. It means that every man may engage in any line of employment that he selects, and under such terms as he and his employer may agree upon; that he may arrange for the kind and character of work which he believes will bring him the largest compensation and the most satisfactory conditions, depending upon his own merit and disposition.

OPPOSED TO CLOSED SHOP.

"The 'closed shop' means that no man can obtain employment in that shop except through and upon the terms and conditions imposed by the labor unions. He is compelled to join the union and to submit to the dictation of its leaders before he can enter the place of business.

"If he joins the union he is then restricted by its leaders as to place of work, hours of work (and therefore amount of compensation), and advancement in position, regardless of merit; and sometimes, by the dictum of the union, called out and prevented from work for days or weeks, although he has no real grievance, and he and his family are suffering for want of the necessities of life. In short, he is subjected to the arbitrary direction of the leader and his personal independence is gone. Personal ambition to succeed and prosper is stifled.

MEANS INDUSTRIAL DECAY.

"This country will not stand for the 'closed shop'. It cannot afford it. In the light of experience, we know it would signify decreased production, increased cost of living; and initiative and enterprise dwarfed.

"It would be the beginning of industrial decay, and an injustice to the men themselves, who prosper only when industry succeeds. The 'open shop' will generally be approved by them, for this permits them to engage in any employment whether they are or are not members of a labor union.

WILL HEAR GRIEVANCES.

"It is appropriate to further emphasize what has been said many times in regard to our employes. Everyone, without exception, must be treated by all others justly and according to merit. In accordance with our established custom, one of our workmen, or a number of workmen from any department, will continue to be received by the management to consider the adjustment of any question presented.

"It is the settled determination of the United States Steel Corporation and its subsidiaries that the wages and working conditions of their employes shall compare with the highest standards of propriety and justice.

COMPANY TO CARRY ON.

"Misrepresentations have already been made and will hereafter be made; unfavorable criticisms may be indulged in by outsiders, especially by those who have little knowledge of the facts; our employes may be threatened and abused in the effort to induce them to join the unions against their own desire; but whatever the circumstances may be, we should proceed with the conduct of our business in the usual way and should give evidence to our employes that we mean to be fair with them."

MAY ABANDON MILITARY COURSE AT WILLIAMS

Williamstown, Sept. 18.—Although no official announcement has yet been made, indications are the course in military art, which has been in vogue at Williams College for the past three years, will be discontinued. Students at the college, it is said, are anxious to put behind them all thoughts of military training and to return to an unadulterated college curriculum.

RULE TOWN NOT LIABLE FOR FIRE DAMAGE

Holden, Sept. 18.—The adjourned town meeting lasted ten minutes. Counsel has ruled in the case of Aulay Matthews, whose barns were destroyed by a fire set by sparks from a brush fire, that the town is not liable, and consequently can appropriate no money to cover the damage.

HOPEDALE EATING ARMY FOOD SUPPLY RAPIDLY

Hopedale, Sept. 18.—Postmaster George P. Sheldon has received the first consignment of the army food recently ordered and it has all been turned over to the purchasers.

There were about 3,000 pounds in the first delivery and a similar quantity is yet to be sent here.

A HOME INSTITUTION

The people of Boston and vicinity are lovers of home institutions, and this spirit is largely responsible for the commercial prosperity of this city.

Every man who has the interest of this city at heart is always glad to welcome an institution which is established for the good of the public.

In these days of high prices men eagerly welcome a chance to save money on their purchases.

An opportunity to save money on men's clothing will be offered by the new and unique P & Q Clothes Shop that is to be opened at 293 Washington St., corner School, one flight up, about September 20th.

The name of the shop is unique, P & Q. The P stands for Price and the Q for Quality.

Lowest in Price—Highest in Quality.

It is one of a chain of thirty-two successful clothes shops already established in New York city, Wilmington, Del.; Trenton, N. J.; Erie, Pa.; Wheeling, W. Va.; Altoona, Pa.; Springfield and Worcester, Mass.; Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport and Waterbury, Conn., and eighteen other splendid cities of the U. S. A.

These shops are owned and controlled by the Great P & Q Clothing Co., 439 Fulton Street, New York city, and are established as distributing agencies for their high grade clothes at $25, $30 and $35, direct to the wearer, at just a little above the wholesale price.

P & Q Clothes are recognized for their style and fit as well as their wearing quality, and particularly for their economy—as every sale means a saving of at least $10 to the purchaser.

The integrity and recognized business ability of the proprietors of this new commercial addition to our city leads us to predict a hearty welcome for their enterprise.—Advt.

A new Form of Soap for the Family Washing

Not a cake soap
Not a "washing powder"
But a wonderful
new Soap Product in fine granules

NO solid soap, to rub into the cloth, and injure the fibre.

No harsh cleansing agents, to "eat" your clothes and destroy the colors.

But a wonderful new soap product—in a new form.

The pure Rinso granules are made of finer quality ingredients than were ever used in a family laundry soap before! They are so mild, your tubful of clothes is as safe with them as in pure water alone.

They are so rich in cleansing value, they loosen all the dirt. You simply soak the clothes overnight, or for three hours in the morning in the rich Rinso suds.

Only a few badly soiled spots, cuff edges, etc., need a light rubbing between your hands.

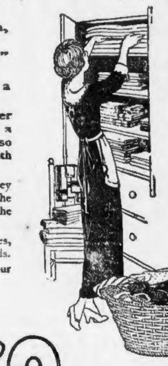
Then you rinse the clothes. And your week's washing is ready to hang on the line, clean and white.

You don't have to stand over the washtub, and rub and rub.

You don't have to stand over the hot range, and turn the hot, heavy clothes with a stick. You need never boil, unless you want to do so occasionally, to sterilize.

Try Rinso with your very next week's washing, following the easy directions on the package. See how different Rinso is from anything ever produced before. How it saves hours of heavy work. How it saves your clothes.

Get Rinso from your grocer. One package will do a week's washing. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass. (Makers of Lux.)



Rinso is not a "Washing Powder"

The fine granules of Rinso look much like a "washing powder," but make this test: Use a heaping teaspoonful to a glass of boiling water.

"Washing Powder" —high in harsh chemicals —low in soap

RINSO —absolutely harmless —so rich in soap it "jellsl"

Rinso

As wonderful for the family washing as Lux is for fine fabrics

WILSON DENIES ENGLAND CAN OUTVOTE U.S.

Answers Question of League of Nations Society in San Francisco

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN.

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

San Francisco, Sept. 18.—President Wilson denied today that Great Britain could outvote the United States in the League of Nations or that she could overcome or offset the American representation.

Ratification of the Treaty of Versailles cannot be prevented.

President Wilson so declared here today. His statement was the culmination of a series of addresses in this city, beginning with his statement to the "women of San Francisco" yesterday afternoon and continued through last night's spicy meeting. He wound up his addresses here in the home of Senator Hiram W. Johnson at a public luncheon by repeating his declaration that there could be no doubt of the final outcome.

It was in carrying out his program of "fighting his opponents in the open" that President Wilson today sent to the San Francisco League of Nations Society the series of questions and answers dealing with communications previously put to him. They were as follows:

ANSWERS MORE QUESTIONS.

Question No. 1—Will you state the underlying consideration that dictated an awarding of six votes to the British Empire in the assembly, and is it true that Great Britain will outvote us in the League of Nations and thereby control the league's action?

Answer No. 1—The consideration which led to the assigning of six votes to the self-governing portions of the British Empire was, in effect, that they have in all but their foreign policies, become autonomous self-governing States, their policy in all foreign affairs being independent of the British government and in many respects dissimilar from it. But it is not true that the British Empire can outvote us in the league, because in every matter except the admission of new members to the League, no action can be taken without the concurrence by unanimous vote of the representatives of the States, which are members of the council, so that in all matters of action the affirmative vote of the United States is necessary and equivalent to the united vote of the representatives of the several parts of the British Empire, which cannot offset or overcome the vote of the United States.

POWER OVER U. S. TROOPS.

Question No. 2—Is it true that under the League of Nations the foreign countries can order the sending of United States troops to foreign countries?

Answer No. 2—It is not. The right of Congress to determine such matters is in no wise impaired.

Question No. 3—What effect will the League of Nations have in either forwarding or hindering the final restoration of Shantung to China? What effect will the League of Nations have in preventing the further spoliation of China and the abrogation of all such special privileges now enjoyed in China by all foreign countries?

Answer No. 3.—The League of Nations will have a very powerful effect in forwarding the final restoration of Shantung to China. No other instrumentality or action can be substituted which could bring that result about. The authority of the League under article 10 will be constantly directed toward safeguarding the territorial integrity and political independence of China. It will therefore absolutely prevent the further spoliation of China, promote the restoration to China of the several privileges now long enjoyed by foreign countries and assure China of the completion of the process by which Shantung will be restored to full sovereignty. Ip the past there has been no tribunal which could be resorted to for any of these purposes.

Question No. 4.—Is there anything in the League of Nations covenant or the peace treaty which directly or indirectly, in any manner imposes upon the United States any obligations, moral or otherwise, of the slightest character to support England in any way in case of revolt in Ireland?

Answer No. 4.—There is not. The only guarantee contained in the covenant is against external aggression, and those who framed the covenant were scrupulously careful in no way to interfere with what they regarded as the sacred right, of self-determination.

FOR IRISH FREEDOM.

Question No. 5.—What effect, if any, will the League of Nations covenant have in either hindering or furthering the cause of Irish freedom?

Answer No. 5—It was not possible for the peace conference to act with regard to the self-determination of any territories except those which had belonged to the defeated empires, but in the covenant of the League of Nations there has been set up for the first time in Article 11 a forum to which all claims of self-determination which are likely to disturb the peace of the world or the good understanding between nations upon which the peace of the world depends can be brought.

These questions and answers represent the position the President has taken in the stronghold of the men who are chiefly opposing the ratification of the treaty. He has announced time and again that he is willing to reply to any questions that may be addressed to him dealing with the general peace situation, and that he is ever ready to make explanations that will make for a better understanding between the Senators, who represent reservations designed to express their belief of what the treaty language actually means and himself. But, under no circumstances, will the President, he says, even assume to compromise with his opponent who would send the treaty back to the peace commission for renegotation or allow it to be lost by defeat.

Tired out with his address in the Auditorium here last night, the President rested until a late hour. He will make a final address here at a luncheon this afternoon, and will address a big crowd in the Oakland Auditorium, across the bay, tonight.

Girl Who Lost Her Fingers Protests State Award

Lawrence, Sept. 18. — Annie Ramondette, aged seventeen, has brought action against the Ayer Mill, seeking to have a decision of the Industrial Accident Board overruled. The case was heard in Superior Court.

The petitioner, according to a finding of the board, was to be compensated for the loss of the first joint of three fingers and the tip of the thumb by being paid two-thirds of her wages in the local mill for a period of twelve weeks. The accident happened while she was at work in the mill in March 1918. The court took the matter under advisement.

DAVIS DIVORCE TANGLE CASE IS POSTPONED

Lawrence, Sept. 18.—The separate support suit brought by Mrs. Mary A. Davis of Haverhill against Charles A. Davis of West Newbury, a wealthy meat dealer in Portsmouth, N. H., in the Probate Court here, was continued until October 1. The defendant claims that he was divorced from the petitioner in Chicago thirty years ago. Mrs. Davis states that she is still the wife of Charles Davis as she was not notified at that time of the divorce proceedings nor at any time since. She was living in this city at the time and is now a public charge of the city of Haverhill. Davis remarried.

20 TONS OF SUGAR ARE DISTRIBUTED IN GARDNER

Gardner, Sept. 18.—Directed by George S. Estey, about twenty tons of granulated sugar were distributed among dealers. A division was made in the consignment in order to give each dealer his share and several stores were so thronged with sugar customers, in some cases the store had to be closed.

Tuttle Will Filed

The will of Abbie A. Tuttle of Littleton, who died August 25, has been filed. It is dated August 23, 1919, and names Louis J. Stone of Littleton as executor. The estate is valued at $15,000.

LEAGUE BASED ON SECRET TREATIES

T. H. Mahoney Declares President Is Deceiving People or Is Himself Misled

"President Wilson is either dishonest or hypnotized. His League of Nations is based on secret treaties between foreign monarchies, not on the Fourteen Points."

This was one of a series of charges made by Thomas H. Mahoney of the Boston law firm of Currier & Young, speaking before more than 1,000 persons in Milton Town Hall under the auspices of the League for the Preservation of American Independence.

He declared the President was using camouflage in his swing around the country in defence of the league. The claim that Ireland and other small nations could get a hearing before the league was termed dishonest and misleading, and the statement that the United States could withdraw from the league at will was termed ridiculous.

Mr. Mahoney's spirited address roused his hearers to enthusiasm. He was introduced by Dr. Frank P. McCarthy of Milton, in the absence of Louis Coolidge. Among the other speakers was Edward F. McSweeney of Boston.

ISSUES WITH PRESIDENT.

The Boston attorney often turned aside from his unsparing attack on the league as a whole to challenge statements of the President made in his Western tour. He took issue with President Wilson on the Shantung incident, the proportionate representation of the nations in the Council and Assembly, and the interpretation of certain important parts of the league structure. Mr. Mahoney said in part:

"What President Wilson says he intended the covenant to mean cannot guide us in considering this document. President Wilson will die. The covenant will live, if he has his way. So the only basis of interpretation is the covenant itself.

"Article 1 provides for withdrawal of league members. But Article 3 provides that the Assembly may deal with any matter within the sphere of action of the leagu, or affecting world peace. Article 4 provides the Council shall have the same power. Certainly this would include the matter of withdrawal. We cannot afford to get into this league if it is to be impossible to get out. One vote cast by any member nation would destroy unanimity and prevent our withdrawal.

HOLDS US TOO CHEAPLY.

"Article 3 provides Great Britain with six votes in the Assemly and the United States with one. How does the President justify the 16 2-3 per cent. appraisal of the United States, as compared with Britain?

"Under Article 4 it is possible for four of these British colonies to elect representatives to the Council of Nine, the real seat of power. Therefore, Great Britain is assured of one vote in the supreme body, and may have five to our one. Under Article [illegible] if America is a party to a dispute she is deprived of a vote. What becomes of our veto power?

"President Wilson argues that we must accept the League, as it was the best he could get. We have prospered under Washington's admonition to be free of entangling alliances and its corollary, the Monroe Doctrine. These policies will be ample security for us now. The league is unnecessary. We are not quitting. The Senate is not quitting. We are simply taking our pre-war position, the best guaranty for future world peace, and peace here at home."

"Cafeteria Shave" Is Latest Product of Philadelphia

By Universal Service.

Philadelphia, Sept. 18.—The barbers' strike here has added a new institution to American life, the "Cafeteria Shave."

The master barbers, deserting the ranks of the strikers, are running several shops here on the "cafeteria style." An outlay of sharp razors are displayed on the marble and customers are invited to shave themselves. Latest advices report no casualties.

Despite the elimination of the barber's work, the usual 15 or 20 cents is collected.

MADE AMERICAN CITIZEN ON HIS 21ST BIRTHDAY

Lawrence, Sept. 18.—What is thought to be a record for punctuality in applying for and being admitted to citizenship of the United States was established here before Judge Bell in a jury waived session of the Superior Court, when Loreto Fuoco of No. 8 Giles street, Methuen, observed his twenty-first birthday by having conferred upon him American citizenship.

Fuoco was born in Italy, September 17, 1898. He came to this country June 2, 1914, and on June 30, 1917, enlisted with L Company of the 104th Infantry. He served overseas and received his honorable discharge August 6 last. He first applied for citizenship last Wednesday, but because the law does not allow a man to be admitted to that status until he is twenty-one, he was advised to return when he had reached his majority.

ATHLETIC EVENTS FOR GRAMMAR SCHOOL PUPILS

Lexington, Sept. 18.—An attractive program of athletic sports for the boys' and girls' grammar school championships has been arranged in connection with the big Lexington country fair and cattle show, at the estate of Miss Ellen M. Tower, on Pelham road, Saturday afternoon, September 27, in aid of the child welfare work. The committee in charge includes Edward H. Mara, chairman; William E. Mulliken, David F. Murphy and John J. Garrity.

Orange, N. J., Sept. 18.—Richard F. Colgate, sixty-five, president of Colgate and Company, died at his home here today.

LLOYD GEORGE SOON TO VISIT AMERICA

May Resign British Premiership as Result of Vexing Problems

London, Sept. 18.—Thomas Howell, Canadian National Secretary of the International Brotherhood, announced at the City Temple that Premier Lloyd George is going to visit America soon.

Horatio Bottomley, independent liberal member of Parliament and noted British publicist, writes in his organ, John Bull:

"Things are moving at a rapid rate and big happenings are imminent. The proceedings at the Trades Union Congress, the election of Arthur Henderson (the labor leader winning in a life-long Tory district), and the drastic policy of Lord French in Ireland have precipitated a crisis, the result of which may be more far-reaching than anything in public affairs for the last fifty years.

PREDICTS NEW MINISTRY.

"We are advised that there is outlook of an early announcement by Lloyd George of a reconstructed ministry—it being universally accepted that the coalition is dead and damned.

"However, I have more startling news. There is reason to believe Lloyd George is so distressed at the turn things have taken and is confronted with so many difficulties in the reconstruction of the government that he will ask the King to relieve him of his present post and, resting on his laurels as the man who won the war, will seek repose from active politics.

"He may even go to the House of Lords, although that is somewhat remote, notwithstanding the fact that by the Carnegie bequest he is to a large extent free from financial anxiety.

"It is more likely that he will offer his services, in an advisory capacity, to the new government. There is no disguising the fact that the whole coalition's house of cards is rapidly tumbling.

"Balfour is finished with politics and will shortly find a more convenient lounge in a gilded chamber. Bonar Law has had enough and there is a growing conspiracy against Long and Chamberlain.

PREMIER FACES DEFEAT.

"Churchill is the object of a veritable vendetta. Sir Auckland Geddes wants to get away to his American university. Eric Geddes is rapidly tiring of his superman job. No permanent ambassador can be found for America. Labor is threatening trouble if the nationalization of the mines is not conceded and all conscripts are not released. Civil war and worse threatens in Ireland. The Peace Treaty is being hung up in America. British credits are at the lowest ebb, and defeat is awaiting the Premier everywhere at the polls, at the hands of poor men bewildered and in distraction.

"In these circumstances Lloyd George is now contemplating the step indicated and which may be proclaimed at any moment unless following the official rule, his request is at first denied."

Vose Player Piano

One does not find much difference in players until one has heard the Vose—then Vose tone quality appeals and reveals the great difference. It contains no thought of the mechanical; this fact pleases those who know tone values.

THE simplicity and ease of its performance make individual expression in its tone possible to a degree unequalled by any other player. A reputation of nearly three quarters of a century devoted to fine piano making guarantees this player.

A comparison, the played roll tells a stronger and more convincing story of its superiority than the written word—an upright piano and player in one instrument. Terms.

Read what the greatest Fashion Creators in America say about

Pictorial Review Patterns.

THESE famous dressmakers, who receive $200, $300, $500 and even more for a single gown, all unite in praising Pictorial Review Patterns. Money could not purchase such testimony. It is the greatest tribute ever paid to a pattern.

Think of it! These internationally famous style creators who cater to the wealthiest society leaders in the world tell you over their own signatures that Pictorial Review Patterns express smartness of style as well as perfection of fit, and that no other patterns are as economical to use.

Any words of our own would be superfluous in the face of these remarkable letters. These testimonials place the supremacy of Pictorial Review Patterns beyond discussion. The voluntary opinions of such style authorities as Hickson, Joseph, Dunstan and Stein & Blaine, forever fix the status of Pictorial Review Patterns. Any statements these master designers make are accepted without dispute in the realm of Fashion. And remember that these patterns are sold by 7,000 leading stores throughout the United States and Canada for only twenty and twenty-five cents each.

STATE BOARD TO TAKE UP CASE OF CUTTERS

Brockton Shoe Workers Demand Upward Revision of Wage Scale

Brockton, Sept. 18.—The State Board of Arbitration is to be called upon to settle the controversy between the Brockton shoe cutters and the manufacturers relative to the demands of the former for a new wage schedule. The cutters are now asking $1 an hour for a forty-eight-hour week.

A short time ago demands were made on the manufacturers for a forty-four-hour week at $1 an hour but this has been revised. The present wage scale is $33 a week for outside cutters and sorters, and $30 for lining cutters. The new scale asked for makes no distinction between outside cutters, sorters or lining cutters, but top cutter are only seeking $32.50. They are at present receiving $26 per week.

Nearly 1,000 workers will be affected by the new schedule, and the cutters in the shoe towns around Brockton will also be benefited by any increase the State Board may grant.

"The American women are lazy," Miss Bertine told the conference, "slothful and vain to be sensible and neglect [illegible] of their own health.

"But the worst of it is," she added, "that they don't want exercise. They are afraid that if they become athletic they will lose their popularity with the men, and they are afraid that if they wear clothes in which they could exercise they will look mannish. They are too vain."

One Hundred Two-Family Homes to Be Erected in Crowded East Section

At last East Watertown has a building boom.

Following the publicity given "Cardboard Village," a [illegible] of half finished houses in which tenants have been compelled to live because of the lack of other dwellings, a Boston syndicate today began the construction of the first of one hundred two-family tenements.

These houses are to be put up on Keenan Field [illegible] the Mt. A[illegible] and near Sacred Heart [illegible] They will cost in the neighborhood of $6,900 each. The syndicate hopes to have many of them ready for occupancy before Winter.

Other builders, encouraged by the enterprise of the Boston concern, are showing a tendency to start operations. The section is in serious straits as the result of the house shortage. The residents of "Cardboard Village" desire to leave the houses, for which they assert too high rentals are asked. The village was built during the war, the houses being erected to meet the emergency.

VOLUNTEER ARRESTS MAN WITH A DIRK

Harry A. Landburg, in the Municipal Court today, was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction for carrying a dirk in a sheath under his coat. He appealed and was held in $1,000. He was arrested today on Columbus avenue by Volunteer Officer John Webber, who overheard a remark that caused him to trail Landburg and saw the dirk when the man attempted to take out a handkerchief.

Marietta, O., Sept. 18.—Alvan Little had a troublesome wasp nest in his barn. So after he put his last load of hay in the place he lit a torch and applied it to the nest. The wasps' home was destroyed, and also the barn.

Sallisaw, Okla., Sept. 18.—After having been unable to talk since he was four years old, Harvey Potter, a negro, awoke the other morning and found that he was able to use his vocal chords to produce sound.

JAPAN DEFIANT ON SHANTUNG QUESTION

Expected to Tell U. S., in Effect, to Mind Her Own Business in Evacuation Matter

By Universal Service.

Washington, Sept. 18.—The uncompromising attitude of Japan toward the United States in reference to its interference in Mongolia and Manchuria is regarded here as an indication that the Nippon government will assume a similar stand on the American suggestion that she fix a date for the evacuation of Shantung.

According to the views of officials the Japanese reply to the request to the United States that she include Mongolia and Manchuria in the consortium or loan negotiations of the powers with China means:

1—That Japan practically has assumed the control of these two great Chinese provinces.

SPLIT SPOILS WITH CZAR.

2—That the boldness with which she is proceeding in the matter shows clearly that she is acting on the secret treaty which she made with Russia in 1916, and which was based on a protocol of a date ten years previous.

Under this treaty Czar Nicholas was to get the part of Mongolia northeast of his dominions. Japan was to get Inner Mongolia and a free hand in Manchuria. In neither case was China to be consulted.

The action of Japan also shows that she is expecting any Russian government that is established to substantiate this treaty. [illegible] She has already seen to that, it is said, and it will make no difference to her whether Kolchak or the Bolshevists get in the upper hand.

JAPAN IS DEFIANT.

Kolchak already is committed to the liquidation of the old treaty obligations of Russia to the Allies so that if he wins there will be no obstacle to the [illegible] of the province. But should the Reds emerge victorious it would be a different matter. Japan, it is said, has considered this eventuality and should [illegible] is prepared to send troops into Siberia to support her claims.

The promptness with which Tokio answered the overtures of the United States in regard to Mongolia and Manchuria is construed as a notice to the world to keep "hands off" in Chinese affairs in which Japan is concerned and that she will answer for her actions to China alone. If this policy is pursued in the Shantung case her reply to the demand that she fix a date for withdrawal from the province will be made direct to China and not the United States.

Brothers Living in Same Town Meet After 49 Years

Tulsa, Okla., Sept. 18.—The other day D. F. Park agreed to answer the telephone calls for his sons, who are in the baggage business, as they had to be out on engagements. The sons have a booth near the Frisco Depot here.

Mr. Park was busy, but not too busy, despite his seventy-eight years, to notice a spry old gentleman who walked up and down the station platform, watching him. After this had continued for some time he approached the stranger and said: [illegible]

[illegible] I am a Missourian."

"I came from Crawford County," said the other old man.

"So did I," shouted Mr. Park.

After a little more conversation it developed they were brothers who had not seen each other since they parted forty-nine years ago. No word had passed between D. F. Park and his brother Samuel, now eighty, since they left Crawford County.

It later developed that Samuel has been living in Tulsa for three years and D. F. for eleven years. They are the only surviving brothers of a family of five.

Bath for Father St. Louis

St. Louis, Sept. 18.—Father St. Louis is going to have a bath. As the statue which occupies a prominent position in front of the Art Museum in Forest Park, he has become rather slovenly in appearance, enough to give visitors to the [illegible] impression of the knight, and so he is going to be "polished up" a bit.

DONOVAN GETS 'L' REPLY ON 5-CENT FARE

Matter of Rate Between Dudley Street Station and Adams Square Being Considered

The Boston Elevated Railway Company has acknowledged the [illegible] between Dudley street and Adams square for a five-cent fare.

Representative Donovan, a candidate for Senator in the [illegible] Suffolk District, has obtained hundreds of signatures from persons who believe there should be a [illegible] fare between the Roxbury terminal and Adams square. He declares [illegible] people now walk between these points rather than pay the [illegible] cent fare.

Edward Dana, acting general manager of the Elevated, in reply to Representative Donovan's letter wrote in regard to the Dudley street-Adams square [illegible] fare:

"I beg to state this is a matter under consideration by the trustees and I am instructed to say [illegible] careful study is being given [illegible] situation, but that the matter is dependent on results obtained from the experiment [illegible]."

"By fixing a [illegible] fare from Roxbury to Adams square [illegible] the company would [illegible] people a much needed service [illegible] would also [illegible] profit for the road," Mr. Donovan said.

TOURISTS ARE WARNED TO OBEY GUARDSMEN

The first thing done by the local representatives of the Anchor line when the steamship Elysia reached her dock at East Boston from Glasgow was to post notices telling of the police strike in Boston and warning everyone on board, passengers and crew alike, that orders from volunteer policemen and State Guards on patrol duty in the streets must be instantly obeyed.

October Cosmopolitan is a Giant in the Land

The Colossus of Rhodes, from a rare old print

If laid end to end October Cosmopolitan would reach from London to Paris

TWO thousand years ago the Colossus of Rhodes, a statue ninety feet high, costing one hundred and fifty thousand dollars and taking twelve years to build, was a giant in the land. People came from near and far to gaze at it and then go back home and tell the natives about it. The statue was one of the seven wonders of the ancient world.

TODAY a magazine, Cosmopolitan, is a giant in the land. If you were to pile up the October edition of Cosmopolitan (1,164,000 copies) one copy on another you would have a shaft of magazines extending more than four miles in the air. Beside it the Colossus of Rhodes would look like a tooth-pick.

It costs almost three million dollars a year to produce the twelve numbers of Cosmopolitan that you can buy for twenty-five cents each. Every month the public pays more for the privilege of reading Cosmopolitan than it pays for the single edition of any other general magazine.

Unlike the great giant of antiquity, this modern giant goes out to the people instead of their coming to it. In 24,000 cities, towns and hamlets, across the length and breadth of the land, more than a million people watch and wait for the day Cosmopolitan is placed on sale.

The ancient Colossus attracted multitudes because of its size and because it represented Hilo, the Sun God, a popular Diety of the day.

Cosmopolitan attracts millions because it publishes the best work of the greatest writers and the greatest artists in all the world in the best magazine that it is possible to produce.

This great magazine is, indeed, a giant in the land—a giant in size, in excellence and in influence.

Right near you there is a place where October Cosmopolitan is for sale. Get your copy quickly because this month's supply will soon be exhausted.

The 100,000 words in Cosmopolitan's editorial section would make a good-sized book

It requires this vast amount of paper to print a single edition of Cosmopolitan

October Cosmopolitan would make a shaft forty times as high as the Washington Monument

It takes about ten hours for 80,000 soldiers to pass a given point. At this rate Cosmopolitan's circulation would take more than 140 hours

120
5 ton trucks

would be required to carry October Cosmopolitan

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy. It's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—Advertisement.

CONVICTION OF MEAT TRUST PREDICTED

Attorney-General Palmer Says Wrath of People Will Be Aroused by Amazing Story

By Universal Service.

Albany, Sept. 18.—"The wrath of the American people will compel a verdict of conviction, for the story will amaze America," said United States Attorney-General A. Mitchell Palmer after declaring that the Chicago packers are to be investigated this week by a Chicago grand jury and that evidence will be submitted which would warrant and support a criminal indictment."

Attorney-General Palmer's statement was made while addressing a conference in the executive chamber here of district attorneys, State officials and food control agency representatives. He declared the packers "not only control 75 per cent or thereabouts of the meat produced and distributed to the American consumer, but they control in sufficiently large proportions to be a menacing factor to the people nearly all of the substitutes for meat which go upon the American table."

WOULD REDUCE PRICES.

The conviction of the packers, the attorney general said, would have far reaching results in the efforts to bring about a general reduction of the cost of necessities.

Mr. Palmer asserted that the people have largely in their own hands the lowering of prices. In this connection he said:

"If the American people will be satisfied that prices are coming down, prices will come down, they must come down, for the very simple reason that one of the chief elements that keep prices up is that people buy in the fear that prices may be higher, and the more they buy the less is the supply and the greater the demand and, consequently, the higher the price.

"If the people of the country over would set their faces like flint against this 'Buy now' campaign which the merchants are putting on the boards, they would beat this high cost of living by that single effort.

BUYING STAMPED SHOES.

"I tell you, my friends, that if you walk into a shoe store to buy a pair of shoes and pick up a shoe and find upon its sole plainly stamped, 'This shoe cost when it left us, the producer, $3.75,' I will be d——d if you will pay $18 for them."

Referring to the remedy that individuals have in dealing with profiteers, the Attorney-General said:

"If you find a crook who is gouging the people and with whom you cannot deal under the State laws, do not let him go until you have turned him over to the district attorney or to our Bureau of Investigation. For from our experience in various parts of the country we have found that there are more ways than one to skin a cat."

SAYS VOTERS DEMAND SOLDIER CANDIDATE

Massachusetts Republicans are warned that unless they nominate Lieutenant-Colonel Frank S. Perkins of Salem for State Treasurer they will not have a world war veteran on the ticket and will meet defeat, in an appeal sent forth tonight by Mayor Charles H. Adams of Melrose. Mayor Adams warns the party that the 200,000 Bay State men who were in the war will resent the absence of the names of service men from the Republican ticket. To this reasoning strenuous exception is taken by Candidate Frederick E. Pierce of Greenfield who insists that he is the strongest possible nominee.

BURNING VESSEL RACES TO PORT WITH ALL SAFE

The 450 passengers on board the British steamship Vestris, which raced into St. Lucia several days ago with a fire raging in her cargo, are safe in the town of Castries, where they are being fed and housed in the Town Hall.

The Vestris is bound from New York to Buenos Ayres. Several Bostonians are included in the passengers. The fire has been extinguished and the damaged cargo is being discharged. It is expected that the Vestris will continue her passage in about ten days.

NEW MOVE TO OUST BAN B.

"Three Musketeers' Open Fire on Czar of Baseball—Herrmann May Also Go

By MATT FOLEY.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—The first gun in the new legal battle between President Ban Johnson of the American League, and league directors Charles A. Comiskey, Chicago, H. H. Frazee, Boston, and Jacob Ruppert, New York, the "Three Musketeers" bent on getting the "Czar," has been fired in the shape of a letter from Comiskey to Ban demanding him to turn over to the board of directors all records and financial statements of the league.

Johnson was not in Chicago, nor is he expected here for several days, according to his secretary, William Harridge, although [illegible] Cincinnati [illegible] had started [illegible].

[illegible] board of directors now will take charge [illegible] argument. Comiskey asserted unless Ban submits the records.

Johnson was asked to produce papers [illegible] directors [illegible] and since he ignored [illegible] he will pay [illegible] demand [illegible] to make [illegible] the three [illegible] Tuesday.

DIRECTORS MEET LATER.

Just when [illegible] League Board of Directors will meet again to take action against Johnson for ignoring the request for the records is not known.

Ruppert said it would [illegible] for a week at least. The New York magnate [illegible] marks he [illegible] the Carl Mays hearing [illegible] saying that the fight would [illegible] and that [illegible] club owners [illegible].

"Mr Johnson may [illegible] for the good of baseball [illegible] own stock in one [illegible] but we don't, and we are determined to [illegible] literate this [illegible] ed. "We have hired legal talent in abundance to prosecute the fight."

The meeting of the joint committee of the American and National leagues appointed last January [illegible] cessor to Chairman [illegible] of the National Commission failed to [illegible] much more than to issue a broad hint to Garry [illegible] was high time for him to quit.

POSTPONE THE SELECTION.

President [illegible] of the Cubs, [illegible] of the committee, said the members had decided to postpone the selection of a new chairman for a few days while [illegible] prospective candidates will be gone over.

It was [illegible] William F. Baker of the Phillies, another committeeman, who [illegible] Garry [illegible] to quit [illegible] a sporting proposition.

Baker explained that Herrmann, as chairman of the commission, would be all-powerful in arranging for the World's Series, involving the Reds, of which contending club he is president.

"It's just like a turf judge officiating at a race in which one of his horses is racing," Baker added. "That wouldn't be right and it isn't right for Mr. Herrmann [illegible] as head of the commission and decide matters in which his ball club is interested."

It certainly is to be expected that Mr. Herrmann will resign before the commission meets for the World's Series preliminaries and thus facilitate the work of the committee.

CONSIDERING FOUR NAMES.

Ruppert, the American League representative on the joint committee, was as mum as his fellow committeemen regarding prospective successors to Herrmann.

Veeck asserted, however, that four names were being considered but refused to disclose [illegible] Judge Landis was among them.

A special meeting of the National League is scheduled for [illegible] New York. [illegible] while he refused to say why the session had been [illegible] the gathering has to do with Herrmann's resignation from the commission.

Just what steps are to be taken to install a new [illegible] were not clearly explained.

Ruppert [illegible] the joint committee [illegible] would [illegible] while others said they believed the individual club owners would vote on the candidates.

LOCAL WRESTLING SEASON BEGINS TONIGHT

The wrestling [illegible] is under way at the [illegible] Opera House with a bang this evening, the fireworks being furnished by Walter [illegible], the middleweight [illegible] and Tony Ajax of Los Angeles. The men [illegible] to go to a finish, two out of three falls under championship rules. Ajax makes his first appearance here in this match, but his excellent record and his ability indicates that Ketonan will have his hands full to retain his title.

Both men have trained to the minute and will step on the mat in the best of shape. The preliminary will show Tommy O'Hara, the Y. D. champion, against an equally fast opponent.

MORE THAN 60 ARE OUT FOR ELEVEN

The line will have [illegible] strong. Ed Malley [illegible] hold [illegible] centre, J. K. Donovan [illegible] ter-scholastic [illegible] last year [illegible] guard, and Joe Kaplow [illegible] will leave only two [illegible] leading candidates for the tackle.

Odds on Fitzsimmons to Defeat Kloby

By JACK CONWAY.

Eddie Fitzsimmons will not lack for advisers when he clashes with Young Kloby in a twelve round bout at O'Sullivan Park, Lawrence, Saturday afternoon. Jack Britton, welterweight champion, and Battling Levinsky, the best of light heavyweights, will be in the New York boy's corner assisting Danny Morgan.

This will give the proper setting to the match. Kloby will probably have Johnny Wilson and several other [illegible] boxers to coach him, besides his trainer, Billy Bell.

Fitz [illegible] workout in this [illegible] tomorrow and will [illegible] Lawrence tomorrow night or early Saturday morning.

[illegible] admirers [illegible] stopped [illegible] boys [illegible]

Fitz is much younger than his rival. He is twenty-three years of age, while Billy Bell's champion is [illegible]. He [illegible] for only four years and so has a great deal of reserve strength. Before Uncle Sam entered the war, Fitz was [illegible] around New York. He defeated Willie Beecher, Harry [illegible], Johnny Harvey and Young [illegible] of Providence. Dy[illegible] knocked Fitz out [illegible] proves that Kloby [illegible] chance [illegible] put over a dream [illegible].

During the war Fitz did his bit in the navy. It was while [illegible] at one of the navy's boxing tournaments that Fitz attracted the attention of Jack Britton. The welterweight champion went to Danny Morgan and said:

"Grab this fellow Fitzsimmons as soon as he gets out of the navy. He's a great fighter. And, more important, he's got a cool head and fine judgment."

Morgan "grabbed" Fitz, and in short order the New Yorker knocked out Shaver O'Brien and Harry Carlson and gave Charley White a terrific beating.

Fitz has had a hard [illegible] bouts with Benny Leonard, Lew Tendler and Johnny Dundee [illegible] a result of a little incident which occurred in a New York gymnasium where most of the star boxers train. Fitz was boxing with Bob Kenney, a strong, hard-hitting [illegible] who is able to take a terrific beating.

Kenney thought he would have some fun at the expense of the youngster recently discharged from the navy. So he started [illegible] Fitz around the gymnasium. His big weight advantage made it possible for him to do so. Then Fitz got angry or something, for his left landed flush on Kenney's jaw and the latter started chasing butterflies, while a score or more ring stars looked on in amazement. The tip was then passed down the line to keep [illegible] from Fitz as he is too stiff a puncher.

When we told Billy Bell how hard Fitz can hit, he laughed. Then he said:

"Kloby has so much confidence in himself that he believes he could take one of Jack Dempsey's punches on the jaw without hitting the canvas. As for Fitz, he'll have the toughest battle of his life at Lawrence, Saturday, and will be beaten."

Boston fans may get tickets for the Kloby-Fitz bout at Room 20, No. 293 Washington street.

The Commercial A. C. show, which was scheduled for tomorrow night, has been called off on account of the police strike.

LEONARD BEATS DUNDEE IN 8 ROUNDS

Newark, N. J., Sept. 18.—Benny Leonard won handily from Johnny Dundee in their eight-round bout at the First Regiment Armory. Dundee was saved by the bell in the fifth round and after that the champion hammered the challenger at will.

In the opening round Leonard had Dundee bobbing around as he hit him with short right hooks. Dundee came back like a flash in the second and third and by a furious onslaught on the champion the Italian evened the fight. In the fourth, Leonard [illegible] loose with right uppercuts. Dundee fought like a fury. Then came the fifth [illegible] and Leonard [illegible] the Italian [illegible] mercy.

Three seconds before the gong the champion landed one [illegible] that staggered Dundee [illegible] before Leonard could put another [illegible] the bell rang. In the last three rounds the Italian was almost helpless against Benny, who [illegible] him at will. In the final session Leonard and Dundee furnished a great finale by stepping out and slugg[illegible].

DIRECT C. BURNETT WINS HARD FOUR-HEAT RACE

Columbus, O., Sept. 18.—Direct C. Burnett, driven by Tommy Murphy, achieved a hard-earned victory in the 2.11 pace. Four heats were required to settle the race, the second brush being won by Eva A[illegible]. Her mile, done in 2.03 flat, was the fastest of the race.

The Horse Review Futurity for three-year-old pacers was won by Julius De Forest in straight heats from the favorite, Goldie King. Peter Thornhill won the 2.15 trot without any trouble.

The 2.09 pace went to Peter Elliott.

YALE PLAYERS PUT THROUGH HARD DRILL

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 18.—Since Dr. Albert H. Sharpe assumed charge of Yale's football coaching on Monday he has made it clear that the present Eli eleven will be thoroughly grounded in the rudiments of the game. No Yale team of recent seasons has been drilled in so painstaking a manner in fundamental [illegible] ties as the squad which has been at work the present week.

Scientific starting, tur[illegible] passing, punt-catching and general [illegible] ing of the ball have been [illegible] into the candidates [illegible] bill of practice which has been given daily, and the Yale eleven which is picked for the final games [illegible] need to prove almost [illegible] perfect in the technique of [illegible] the ball.

Sharpe was himself a product of the old school of Yale football, which demanded no fumbles, the most efficient passing and [illegible] and the cleverest footwork possible.

While former coaches have almost immediately formed elevens for [illegible] tative signal drill, Dr. Sharpe is keeping the line and the backfield candidates in separate divisions in order to emphasize his policy of perfect preparation in [illegible] drill in the fundamentals of football.

Today the coaches believe that the squad will reach 125 in [illegible] college opens in two weeks. It is a matter of surprise that the linemen are more numerous and heavier than has been expected, while the back field division is smaller in number [illegible] lighter in weight.

The backfield candidates [illegible] some exceptionally clever performers, including the veteran Jim Braden at [illegible] ter Lalloche [illegible] Joe Neville, Thorne Murphy and Herbert Kempton as [illegible] Andre[illegible] has been [illegible] one of the most promising dropkickers. He appears likely to develop into a clever plunging back. He is one of the heaviest [illegible] of the squad.

The rushline as composed of Captain Tom Callahan at centre, Galt and Stienburg at guard, Walker and Kirkpatrick at tackle and Hamill and [illegible] at end is one of the heaviest in recent years.

A. A. FLAG WINNERS TO PLAY COAST CHAMPIONS

Chicago, Sept. 18.—Announcement of a championship series between the [illegible] winners of the American Association and the Pacific Coast League to be played at Los Angeles, has been made by Thomas Hickey, president of the American Association. President Hickey also announced that negotiations for a series between the champions of the International League and American Association had been definitely called off.

THREE SQUADS ARE GIVEN WORKOUT AT DARTMOUTH

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 18.—Three squads of Dartmouth football candidates were put through a long signal workout by Coaches Spear, Llewelyn and Cole for the second consecutive day. In addition drill in punting and tackling the dummy was run through. Just before the close of the session the ends were sent down the field to receive and run back punts. They were tackled by the backs following the ball, oftentimes in their tracks.

SHIVERICK IS PICKED AS CORNELL CAPTAIN

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 18.—Quarterback Fred Shiverick has been elected captain of the Cornell football team. He was captain-elect of the Cornell eleven in 1917, but never served, as he left the university to enter military service. He was a captain of artillery in France.

HARVARD TEAMS TO SCRIMMAGE ONCE MORE

Another big football scrimmage was due on Soldiers Field today. Coach Fisher is getting his charges prepared for action in order to determine the material for the opening game which is now less than ten days away.

Simple formations are booked for the opening [illegible]. The Crimson supporters [illegible] that their team will have little trouble [illegible] of the Pine Tree Staters and the customary line bucking and end running plays with an occasional exchange of forward passes will be used.

LINEUPS AT HARVARD.

The lineups of the [illegible] scrimmage were:

Team A—l.e., Weatherhead; l.t., [illegible] Cagg; l.g., Brown; c., Pulbini; Woods; r.t., Sedgwick; r.e., Phinney; q.bs., Murray, Wales; h.bs., Wharton, Burnham; f.b., A. Horween.

Team B—l.e., Desmond; l.t., Hubbard, Hadley; l.g., Olmsted; c., [illegible] comber; r.g., J. Caswell; r.t., Salte[illegible]; r.e., Ryan; q.bs., Felton, Conlon; h.bs., Church, Hamilton; f.b., Nelson.

Neither team could gain any advantage in the scrimmage. [illegible] Horween missed two field goals by narrow margins. Both he and Eddie Casey played as substitute backs. [illegible] Fisher told the men that the makeup of the teams meant nothing. The point was to familiarize the players with the signals.

THREE MEN OUT.

The team has three invalids. Paul Thomas, a nifty looking end, has a charley horse and Babe Frothingham has an inconsequential injury. Arthur [illegible], the husky convalescing guard, also watched affairs from the side line yesterday. Coach Fisher is taking no chances this season with his strong players.

Donald Falvey of Brookline has been appointed manager of the second team, and Tom Laine is assistant manager. This pair is preparing a schedule for their eleven which will comprise contests with the same scrub teams in the vicinity.

The freshman team has been ordered to report Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock to Dr. Paul Withington, who will be the head coach. One of the biggest squads of yearlings that Harvard has had in recent years is expected.

[illegible] mile [illegible] and such well known performers as [illegible] Simpson's greatest rival, Lou [illegible] Murchison, the N. Y. A. C. sprinter, Earl Eby, Mike Devaney, Walter [illegible], [illegible] Walter [illegible] and a host of [illegible] Legionaires that they would compete in the games.

MISS DUNCAN IS LOW SCORER AT BRAE-BURN

The qualifying round of the club championship of the Brae-Burn Country Club was held over the Brae-Burn links, the best eight scores to qualify for the championship proper. Miss Katherine F. Duncan had the best score in the qualifying test, scoring a 98 for her round. Mrs. C. S. Duryea finished second three strokes behind the leader. Scores of 111 or better are eligible to play for the title, the first round of 18 holes to be played a week from yesterday.

Golf News and Notes

That you never can tell in golf what to expect was shown by the reverse in form by Jack Hotens Tuesday. Monday Jack was around the eighteen holes at the Engineers Club for an individual score:

Out .... 4 5 3 4 4 3 4 7—41
In. 3 5 4 4 3 5 4 3 4—35—76

The only bad hole in his score being the dog-leg ninth into which Jack got into lots of trouble. This score was made in the professional amateur four-ball match.

Then to show how a man can hit them around with a seven in his eighteenth and then only be two strokes above the course record seventy-four, held by Herbert Strong, the home professional, Jack goes to work on Tuesday and gets the lacing of his life at the hands of Harry Hampton to the tune of 7 and 6. That's golf, one day you can hit them with everything in the bag only to find out that on the next day you seemed to hit them the same way but they just won't go right.

HITTERS WILL STAR IN BIG SERIES, SAYS FULLERTON

THIS is the first of a series of articles on the coming World Series between the White Sox and Reds, by Hugh S. Fullerton, baseball's greatest statistician. Mr. Fullerton will compare the rival pitchers, size up the play of the two teams and name the probable winner of the great Fall sporting classic.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

The World's Series of 1919 presents one of the toughest doping problems ever offered. The series between the Cincinnati Reds and the Chicago White Sox is unlike any ever played in modern baseball with the exception of the battle royal between Detroit and Pittsburgh.

For the first time in more than a decade, the series promises to be a free hitting affair between two strong batting clubs, instead of the usual contest between finished pitchers.

Naturally, in such a series, the interest runs higher and the faith of the backers of each team is more firm. Ordinarily it is not hard to dope a world's series when one team possesses air-tight pitchers and the other does not

Last Fall the series was hard to dope because both teams had air-tight pitching, exactly designed to stop the hitting of the other club and the two contenders figured so close together that any bit of luck would turn the tide. Luck did turn the tide, luck and a bush leaguer injected into the series because he was a right-handed hitter.

TEAMS HAVE STAR PITCHERS.

But the Cincinnati-White Sox problem is a lot different. Each team has two pitchers far above average, that is, above average in their own leagues. Each team has one real star. Each team hits mightily in its own leagues. Each team has hit all kinds of pitching hard this year.

The problem is to discover whether the Red pitchers are of the kind liable to check the White Sox sluggers, and vice versa, and, if neither can stop the other, which is the strongest batting team—not in its own league, but against the kind of pitching it must face

The task of doping this series leaves me torn between love and duty

I've been rooting for the Reds for forty years, and for Comiskey ever since he was manager of the Reds and all through his Chicago career. Naturally, also, I have been rooting for Pat Moran. Wanting to root for both clubs is unusual, but it results in neutrality and we'll let the figures decide.

I start with the firm conviction that the White Sox possess a shade the better of the straight hitting strength, and that, in present form at least, Moran has a shade the better of the pitching argument. I have not yet touched a comparative figure, so these are merely conjectures based upon figures obtained by examining the records of the men in their own leagues.

I want all you fellows who are wishing you knew which team would win the series to start right in and dope the series with me. Don't say it can't be done. It can. I doped the two major leagues this Spring, the hardest season to dope we ever had because of constant trades, sales and releases of players which altered team strengths. Of the sixteen clubs twelve show now almost exactly the percentage they figured to win and lose during the year

HOPE TO DOPE SERIES.

The system is not hard. You can do it just as well as I can if you follow the rules. Any time you disagree with me just change and put your own figures in place of mine and see which comes nearer. Remember, however, that every figure is based upon the best obtainable percentages of performances during this season, considered with the official figures of last season

The system, briefly, is this: The full strength of a team is 100 per cent. If the defensive value of all teams exactly equalled the attacking value no team ever would score a run. By taking figures for a dozen years, I discovered that the attacking strength of any team is 64 per cent, and defensive strength is 36 per cent. Those figures may not be exactly right, but they are approximately correct.

I reached the figures by taking the number of bases advanced in comparison with outs and the proportion holds good year after year. That means that batting, base running, etc.—all the elements of attack—are more valuable than the elements of defense.

To decide the attacking value of any player do not rely upon his batting alone. His attacking value is hitting, plus base on balls, hit by pitched ball, sacrifice hits, stolen bases and speed—by speed meaning his ability to take two bases on a doubtful double until he establishes its value.

The average attacking worth of each man is therefore one-ninth of the total team attacking value or 7 per cent., which I carry out to thousandths, making it .700 It makes no difference whether we say .7, 70 or .700 if the proportion is maintained Each man, theoretically, is .700 in attacking value

We know this is not true, as some men hit, run and slide better than others. But, if the average batter hits .247, then .247 is equal to .700 If the average player draws twenty-six bases on balls a season, then his value in that respect makes 26 equal .700

Find the average in each part of the attack. Now, if the average is .700, how much over the average is Heine Groh? Find how many more times he draws bases than the average, how many points he bats over the average etc., add it to .700 and you have Groh's attacking value. Do that with each player

In defensive value, we find another element. We know that the pitcher is more important in defensive work than the left fielder. Therefore, it was necessary for me to figure the position values of each man on a team. I did this by calculating the number of chances in each position and the relative importance of the chances. I figured that in defensive work a pitcher is 36 per cent., catcher 14 per cent., etc., all through the team. The pitcher, therefore, is worth 36-100ths of 36—or 13 and so on through the team If the average pitcher's value is .130 (the cipher added to enable me to make small differences clearer) how much above the average is Eddie Cicotte when pitted against the known attacking strength of the Reds?

MUST STUDY EACH PLAYER.

You can see that we run into a nice little bunch of figures. We first sit down and study the work of each man in his own league and calculate his attacking value and defensive value.

But, for instance, Weaver's value is not the same against Walter Johnson as against some bush leaguer. Therefore, to find his value in the coming series we must calculate which pitchers will work against him and what his value is against that kind of pitching.

By following this method closely we reach the value of each individual in this series. We then assemble them into teams and, figure team values both in attack and defence. The final step is to figure the team value against each pitcher. By using the known attacking power of the club, we can figure very closely how many hits and runs that team ought to make against each pitcher.

It remains to apply those to the pitchers, figure which pitchers will work against each other, and we have the approximate scores of the games.

In commencing this study, I discovered an odd thing—that the teams are strong in the same positions and that their weaknesses are in the same spots. This applies to every position on the clubs and leads one to wonder if there is anything in such construction that will explain their victories in their own leagues

We will discover, too, that neither team measures up with former standards of World's Series clubs Neither is a great ball club, and each has serious defects in construction However, what interests us now is to discover which will win the series. We will start by studying the first basemen and comparing them point by point, to discover their value.

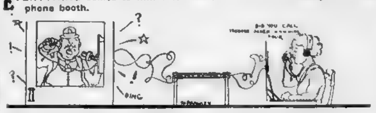
EVERYTHING comes to him who waits. Unless he's waiting in a telephone booth.



EVERY call nowadays is a long distance call. On the clock.

• • •

STATISTICS show that it now takes twice as long not to get a number as it did in 1917. Getting a number is tougher than a rubber ham.

• • •

THE Bell officials blame the poor service on the war. We know the Kaiser is responsible for prohibition. He chirped that one, two, three—the war would be over. Einst, he would take Paris. Zwei, London, and drei, New York. He missed the first two, but New York is dry, isn't it?

• • •

THE Rocky Boulevard to Dublin is a billiard table compared to the tour of the soup brained sapp who tried to grab a number in the phone raffle. A phone booth is a form fitting chamber of horrors. You waddle in and snitch the receiver off the hook. That's like taking the bait off, for you never catch anything with an empty hook. Then you slip a loose jit in the nickel trap and wait to hear the clams sing.

• • •

ALL conversation on the telephone is accidental. The booths are soundproof and so are the wires. After a few seventy-minute hours central jiggles the safetly clutch and your nickel pops out like a bat out of Hades. It's heads. Drop it in again and out it skips. Tails. Just like matching coins. Beautiful way of spending the day without any war tax. You start with a jitney and end with the finif.

• • •

LIFE is short and the telephone service is making it shorter. Ask for Zobbux 1986. Central pays no attention to the Zobbux and she thinks the 1986 means the year you want the number. Call Gimbaffle 5643, Party B, and you get the number about the same time that a village needs a subway.

• • •

YOU can't blame all this on the Kaiser In the first place, the Kaiser loved the telephone His battle record shows that.

• • •

THE bird who invented the fireless cooker got the idea trying to snare a number. After being in the booth for two hours he noticed that his ears were fried on both sides. Another bimbo was four days trying to inform his wife that he wouldn't be home for three days. The police found him in the telephone booth pumping the hook like a milkman, but the old phone had gone dry. They saved the expense of a straitjacket by just locking the door and taking the whole works to the delirium phonema

• • •

THEY say that a soft boiled answer turns away wrath. But a guy whose language is shimmying with cuss words doesn't want any soft boiled, grilled, cooked or steamed answers from central. He wants something out of a telephone book, not a menu. A cuckoo up in Yonkers waited six hours for a number and then pulled the phone out by the roots. He got a number all right, but he has to do a lockstep to keep it. The police won't allow him to have a phone in the cell, as the cord is just the right length for a noose. Outside of that, it ain't much use

IF you pipe a gent in a telephone booth making motions like a cinnamon bear fighting fork-tailed hornets and squawking into a receiver like a Jazz trombonist, you will know that peace is here and the abnormal war conditions are over.

A Mystery Story of New York Life

THE GRAY HAIR

With a Deeply Interesting Plot

The Action So Far

John Hastings, multi-millionaire and captain of industry, has employed Robert Allaire, a young lawyer, to do some work for him. A criminal impersonates Allaire and reveals himself as a member of "The Society for the Redistribution of Superfluous Wealth." He threatens Hastings, who attempts to summon aid. The visitor shoots him dead and escapes. Arrested later, Allaire proves a perfect alibi. Police Commissioner Blake is puzzled. Meanwhile three other [illegible] are slain. Allaire receives a note from the society and talks over his arrest and the letter with Allison Courtney, his fiancee. Her uncle urges the young man not to call on Allison until the excitement has died down. She assures him of her devotion. Blake is replaced by Heenan, a famous detective. Allaire offers his help in solving the mystery and is abused by the new commissioner. The latter promises to have the murderer under lock and key in forty-eight hours. Allaire and Blake join forces to work on the case unofficially. Allison Courtney has an argument with her uncle over Allaire.

"Well, Uncle, you made me hurry to catch you," she laughed. Then her laugh died away as the man whom she had taken, by reason of his walk and figure and black overcoat and dark hat, to be her uncle, turned an alien face upon her.

"Hard[illegible] like [illegible] not so great that I would deny my own [illegible] But I [illegible] what you do not—the inadvisability of his continuing to call for the present."

"But [illegible] him if [illegible]"

He [illegible]

"[illegible] that you will be certain of his need before attracting unpleasant public attention."

Cool and Collected

"You understand, though, that I don't feel bound by [illegible] have said a [illegible] was here—that I'll feel free to see him."

"I understand," he said. He rose from the [illegible] bowed [illegible] more. "I am sorry not to be able to be home for dinner, my dear. An engagement—"

"Very well," she told him.

He left the room, and Allison had an uncomfortable feeling of having been worsted in a battle of wits—not exactly that, perhaps, but as though she had failed to make the slightest impression upon her uncle, try as she had. He was cold-blooded; not one word had he said of sympathy for her lover or for herself.

Then she roused herself from contemplation of his lack of lovableness. He was her uncle. In his way, he had been kind, in his way, he was undoubtedly trying to act for the best know. She tried to forget his coldness.

The girl shrank from seeing any of her friends. She spent the afternoon alone, and dined alone, waited upon by the discreet maid who looked sympathy that her station forbade her to express, despite the scene she had witnessed in the hall that morning.

Allison read the afternoon papers after dinner. She devoured every line bearing on the mysterious killing [illegible] every bit of [illegible] and feminine [illegible] more. Then she noticed that they were not the last editions. These [illegible] just around the corner.

She felt the inaction of the past hours chafing her. Allaire had been out, undoubtedly, doing something to ferret out the mystery. [illegible]

[illegible] late editions to be found at the newsstand outside [illegible] afforded an excuse. True, it was after dark, and she ought to send a servant, but a woman of twenty-two ought to be able to walk down to the corner without coming to harm. She left the library and donned hat and coat. She slipped quietly out of the house and turned west toward the Martinette.

Evidently Preoccupied

She bought all the latest editions and recrossed Madison avenue, on which was the Martinette. Her uncle's house was on East Thirty-sixth street, on the north side of the block, half way between Madison and Park avenues. As she crossed the avenue, she saw a familiar figure going north toward Thirty-seventh street. It was her uncle.

Why he should have passed his own street, she did not know, indeed she did not stop to consider. She only knew that, despite his coldness, she would like to talk to him and get a masculine opinion of the tangle that she had seen from a glance at the headlines, and which was not only still unravelled, but more perplexing than ever. She sped up the street after her uncle.

He turned into Thirty-seventh street. Evidently he'd walked past his street in preoccupation. She turned the corner thirty yards behind him. Her gait increased; she caught up with him in the middle of the block. She touched his arm.

"Well, uncle, you made me hurry to catch you," she laughed. Then her laugh died away as the man whom she had taken, by reason of his walk and figure and black overcoat and dark hat, to be her uncle, turned an alien face upon her.

"I beg [illegible] pardon," said the stranger in a [illegible]

[illegible] why [illegible]

"Not [illegible] But excuse me, I"—— Her voice trailed away in embarrassment.

"Not at all, the apologies are mine for leading you astray. I wish that I might have been your uncle. Fortune would then have been kind to me." He lifted his hat as he spoke, and the silver hair that gleamed in the light of an arc lamp offered the excuse of age for what might have been impertinence [illegible]

[illegible] eyes are [illegible] Then she passed by the courteous stranger [illegible]

Finds Him Home

As she reached Park avenue, to [illegible] complete the circuit of the block which would bring her home, she looked back. The elderly [illegible] like that of [illegible] had been left a score of paces behind her. A faint doubt came to her. Then she tried to shake it off. The stranger's walk and build were similar to her [illegible] different. The resemblance was merely passing; also, the hair and voice was [illegible] The stranger's voice was [illegible]

"I'm a silly," she told herself. "It wasn't uncle—I know that—and yet"——.

She felt relief when she had entered her home. She saw her uncle's hat and coat on a stand in the hall. And then he called to her from the library.

"Why, Allison, where have you been?"

She joined him before the open fire. Then a new thought came to her—an idea that made her shudder.

"Uncle!" she cried, "has the Society for the Redistribution—you know—has it ever threatened you?"

He raised his eyebrows.

"Why do you ask?"

"Because I just saw a man; he looked like you, and I thought he was you until he spoke, and—oh, I don't know why, but there's so much impersonating going on—he seemed a harmless old man, but—I don't know. Tell me," she ran on; "it didn't seem like you, independent of the world, to mind what people said [illegible] not letting Bob come here—tell me!"

A Confession.

"I didn't want to [illegible] Allison, but yes; I have been threatened. But don't be alarmed, my dear," he cried, as she grew white. "No [illegible] ago [illegible] would be notified [illegible] of when to send my contribution and where. They'll hardly move against me when I haven't refused their demands as yet. And even if they should, my dear, there is no cause for alarm. Did the [illegible]"

"Oh, no!" She told him how vague was the resemblance.

"Mere chance," he said. "This affair is on your nerves, Allison."

She shuddered.

"I can't help it."

He [illegible]

"But there is no need for alarm. Today I telephoned Heenan, the famous detective, who had just been made Commissioner of Police. If you were to cross the street, Allison, you would undoubtedly find two of his men hiding in areas, watching this [illegible] now perhaps, you understand why I didn't want Allaire to come here. But I tried to keep this from you to save [illegible]"

How she had misjudged him! This cold, aloof man had kept the secret of his danger from her even through the fearsome news of the day! Most elderly men, she judged, would have been panic-stricken with fear after the killings of the past twenty-four hours. But her uncle! He had thought of her, first, last and all the time!

Her head was on his breast as she gave way to tears. He patted her hair.

"There, there, my dear! There, there, my dear!"

The First Fall Hats

By Rita Stuyvesant

At this stage of the [illegible] season [illegible] and fas[illegible] from hats [illegible] all Until the modes [illegible] one must grope around accepting faithfully the styles that are first being offered. However, there promises to be a wide variety of heavy white mesh veil, bordered in models to choose from, and if one selects the hat that is most becoming she is not liable to stray far from being fashionably "crowned."

A hint of the popularity that wool embroidery promises to enjoy is given in a smart [illegible] toring. White broadcloth was the favored fabric, and was wound into a graceful [illegible] turban. Black worsted traced an odd design over the top and sides and lent distinction to this small hat.

For windy days one wears a chiffon, with small black figures silhouetted against the whiteness. To confine the veil against September zephyrs, narrow black ribbons tie themselves in a pert bow at the top of the hat.

To top a dress of tan wool velour, there was a smart tailored hat of the same material. It was a rather large shape with a deep crown and straight but short brim, covered with conventional figures cut from dark brown velours. These figures were laid flat and pasted to the brim. A narrow tan leather belt was buckled around the crown and added not a little cache to this smart hat.

An unusually youthful hat that has again made its appearance in the smart shops is of black silk velvet. The soft crown is made in two parts and the shirred brim rolls back from the face and neck, forming graceful points over the ears. For trimming a large pearl pin is thrust into the front of the hat at a sharp but smart angle.

Very rakish indeed are these hats when worn deep on the head at a fashionable tilt.

Satin is also being favored for early Fall and there are some charming studies in black and white. White faille silk combines wonderfully well with shiny black satin, and when one adds a bit of white kid trimming there is nothing more to be desired in the way of smart millinery.

Lobster Thermidor

Split a nice live lobster weighing about one and a quarter pounds. Broil it on a slow fire. When done take the meat out and cut in small pieces. Make a reduction of white wine, faragon shallots; add some thick cream sauce, one teaspoonful of English mustard and a small quantity of glace de Viande. When boiling take some fresh butter, mix it with the sauce, whipping very hard (the same as for Hollandaise sauce). Add the pieces of lobster to the sauce, mix it nicely to avoid breaking the meat. Fill the shells with the mixture, put a little parmesan cheese over and bake in a quick oven. Serve very hot.

CHAPTER CLXXV

THE Harrison-West after-theatre supper was just what might have been expected—hilarious. If Jim's presence made Dick West a trifle more deferential and respectful in his treatment of Phoebe, it didn't abate one jot of her coquetry. Jim was evidently too tired to do much more than play spectator to Phoebe's little tricks and allurements and Doris West's somewhat cheaper efforts to be very [illegible] and what she thought was very charming.

Of course I reacted by being very stiff and dignified, and on the way home in our new taken as a-matter-of-course taxi, Jim commented on that.

"Anne, you're getting to be a regular 'Miss Prim.' You should have seen the way you sat up and glared at those two nice girls making up to their young men tonight. Don't you know that not every woman can be the self-contained icicle you are?"

"Oh Jim, I don't want to be an icicle!"

The cry swept from me before I could stop it and as I heard my voice I was humiliated at the plea I could detect in its every intonation. But Jim interpreted it to suit himself.

"You may not want to be—but you are these days," he replied. "No getting away from it. Once a woman has earned her own living and has been her own boss, she can't settle down to playing second fiddle and catering to her husband. I guess no 'new woman' or 'feminist' or whatever you call 'em, can ever make an old-fashioned lovey-dovey wife."

"You mean I am a failure—as a wife," I said sadly.

"Not for me!" declared Jim with a vigor that hurt even more than fault-finding could have. "I like this business of being partners and pals—like it fine. Romance and hand-holding don't help a man on with his career, not by a darn sight. But being regular fellows together does."

That pleased Jim, so we arrived home in an amiable mood, destined to be short-lived, for Neal was waiting for us, and Jim's greeting to him was:

"Well, now, suppose you tell me why you couldn't join us—young bullhead?"

"Was it Evvy's fascinations?" I broke in, trying to give Neal his cue.

Perhaps Neal didn't hear me, perhaps he scorned evasion, but like the blundering, if gallant, "bullhead" he is, he replied:

"Jim, Phoebe doesn't—like me any more. I thought I'd better not force myself on her."

"Nonsense, boy; nonsense!" replied Jim in the superior tone the successful man often uses to the chap a few paces behind him in years and several rungs below him on the ladder of success. "You and Phoebe were children when you met. You've both outgrown your attack of calf love and she's growing up fast, now that a real man has taken her in hand. I must have you meet West. He's a fine chap."

"Thank you," replied Neal, dryly. "I hope he is."

Jim was too centred in his own ideas to worry much about Neal's ideas so now he went on in elaborately big brotherly guide and mentor fashion.

"Better go to bed, young fellow, so you'll be fresh as a daisy when you start to work tomorrow."

"I'm — not starting," confessed Neal.

"Why not?"

"No job."

Neal smiled as he made the admission but it was a smile so wry that it didn't escape Jim, who replied instanter—and may it be marked down to his credit:

"Don't let that worry you. All you have to do is to come down with me and hang up your hat in Harrison & West's office. The job's there."

"Thank you, Jim." Neal came and flung his arm across Jim's shoulders in a gesture eloquent of his longing for any appreciation of just such kindness. "But I don't know your game—don't even know what it is—exactly."

"Stocks [illegible] stocks a specialty. Didn't Anne tell you?"

"Yeah, but I didn't get it. No head for stocks. Guess I won't take you up, Jim. Your partner mightn't like it anyway."

"Who? West. Didn't I tell you he's the finest chap going. You're hired, Neal," insisted Jim.

"Jim, you're a real brother," said Neal in a voice that crumpled up along its outer edges. "But I can't take you up. If you'll be a good fellow and give me a home again even though I can't pay this time—"

"Pay!" shouted Jim furiously. "Pay! Do you mean that Anne took money from you last time you were here? Answer me—answer me. Did she?"

Poor, tired, hard-pressed Neal had unconsciously betrayed me. But now, before he could betray also his quivering, sore young self, I turned to Jim.

"Jim dear, I needed—"

"You needed, you needed! And you told your brother what a poor provider your husband was, and humiliated me before that boy Neal. I'll be saying good-night. I've a few thinks to say to your sister. Come, Anne."

Neal started forward, but I shook my head and followed Jim into the next room.

To Be Continued.

TODAY'S BEAUTY HELP

We find you can bring out the beauty of your hair to its very best advantage by washing it with canthrox. It makes a very simple, inexpensive shampoo, which cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly of all the dandruff, dirt and excess oil, leaving a wonderfully clean, wholesome feeling. After its use, you will find that the hair dries quickly and evenly, is never streaked in appearance and is always bright, soft and fluffy; so fluffy, in fact, that it looks more abundant than it is, and so soft that arranging it becomes a pleasure. Just use a teaspoonful of canthrox, which you can get from any good druggist, dissolve it in a cup of hot water; this makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head.—Advertisement

New Norwegian Line

A new line of Norwegian steamships, known as the North and South Atlantic Line, will operate three ships between Christiania, New York, Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires. The first sailing will be from the home port on or about October 1.

LOCAL MARKET WEAK AND DULL

Influenced by Same Conditions As Actuated Prices in New York

Weak and dull at the opening, the Boston market did not alter in essentials at all during the morning. Prices moved within a range in most instances. Mohawk, whose directors declared a quarterly dividend of $1 a share, declined more than two points on the first transaction. The distribution was the same as three months ago. Quincy receded a point and American Woolen preferred more than one. Swift & Co. was weak. At its morning lowest it was off two points.

Among issues to recede fractionally were Parish & Bingham, Root & Van Dervoort, Libby, Swift International, New Haven, U. S. Smelting, New Cornelia, Davis Daly, North Butte and National Leather.

Stocks to show gains during the forenoon included American Telephone, East Butte, Mayflower-Old Colony and Seneca. Advances were fractional.

The market in this city was governed by the same influences which affected the one in New York. The prospect of a steel strike was the most depressing of all.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

August production by the Shattuck Arizona Copper Company was 886,027 pounds of copper, 708,528 pounds of lead, 33,383 ounces of silver and 51 ounces of gold.

Articles filed with the Massachusetts commissioner of corporations by the Shubert Cigar Company call for an increase of capital stock from $25,000 to $150,000.

While copper shares have been neglected for some time, it is remarked that even when the metal situation was unfavorable, selling pressure against such securities has been light.

The $1,500,000 C. R. Wilson Body Company 7 per cent. preferred stock purchased by Lee, Higginson and Company, is the entire outstanding issue of an authorized total of $5,000,000. The common stock outstanding consists of $567,150 out of an authorized issue of $2,000,000. Established more than forty years ago to make carriage and wagon bodies, this concern began the manufacture of automobile bodies in 1898 and is the second largest producer in the country, having plants at Detroit and Bay City. In the three and one-half years ended June last, the company's earnings averaged more than three times the dividend requirements of the new preferred stock, the proceeds of the sale of which are to be used to retire $750,800 6 per cent. serial bonds.

Wall Street Briefs

Chandler & Company, Inc., announce that the Troy Laundry Machinery Co., Ltd., on September 9, declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. on the preferred and 2½ per cent. on the common stock.

The Century Steel Co. announces that they have granted exclusive agency for Japan to Yamase Company. It is said also: "The concern is rated high and forms a most desirable outlet for tool steels in a field that has increased rapidly during the war, especially along ship building lines."

Jones and Thurmond have received from President Jones of the Republican Oil and Refining Co. a telegram stating: "The development of the company's properties has been progressing very satisfactorily. Two gushers have been brought in since the last dividend was declared. Well No. 7 is down 1,050 feet; Well No. 8 down 500 feet; Well No. 9 down 1,525 feet; casing to be set Monday. These three wells are on block No. 97, in the Burk-Waggoner Extension. Well No. 10, which is to be drilled on lease adjoining gusher lease in the Lanier tract, is now setting up."

PRICES LOWER FROM THE OPENING

Tobacco Issues Are Strong and a Few Specialties Make Gains

Stocks were weak in New York at noon, being at the lowest around 12 o'clock. At the end of the morning prices, which had ruled lower from the opening, dropped further under the leadership of steels. Trading was of small volume, transactions for the first hour totalling but little more than two hundred thousand shares.

There were strong stocks in the list, however. Tobaccos were higher as a class, with American Tobacco selling at its 1919 highest. American Snuff advanced nearly twenty points during the forenoon. American Can was strong and a number of specialties stemmed the adverse price current.

Weakest issues at noon included Bethlem B, Hide & Leather preferred, Central Leather, Baldwin, Mexican Petroleum, Pan American and Utah Copper. They had reached from one to three points.

U. S. Steel was off a point, at 102½. Its morning range was from that figure to 103¾.

The opening call money rate was 4 per cent. There was a steadier tone to foreign exchange rates.

LOWER AT THE OPENING.

Prices declined when the market opened, and while losses did not average large they were general. Oils were weak and steels and equipments had a receding tendency. Motors showed a little strength. Selling pressure came principally from the professional bear element. The public had little hand in the market. Important financial interests are understood to be holding aloof except to watch for opportunity to buy at bargain figures. The supply of stocks is not regarded as large, and this view is supported by the ease with which the market rallies. It requires a good deal of aggression to force prices down, and they come back quickly when pressure is relaxed. There was a rallying tendency after the start today, and the list became irregular, and so remained for a few minutes. A renewal of the bear drive caused another recessional and the market was weak at the end of the first hour.

STRIKE FEARS A FACTOR.

Threat of a strike in the steel industry was the dominating market influence. According to the mornnig news the situation had reached a phase where a walkout or a change of attitude on the part of organized labor seemed inevitable. Selling of stocks reflected belief that earnings of steel companies will be considerably lessened for a time. A strike is expensive to everybody concerned. Judge Gary's statement is regarded in financial districts as a momentous declaration. It is understood that steel manufacturing and allied interests are prepared for a fight to the end of resources. A strike in the steel industry may involve strikes in many others. No one can foretell how far it will reach or what consequences it will entail upon this country. Under the circumstances it may be said the stock market is indicating a great deal of confidence on the part of investors. There is no inclination to liquidate. The disposition is to hold tight and stand pat.

FEDERAL BRASS SALE AFFECTS COPPER TRADE

Copper producers have sold little or no metal for three weeks and do not expect to find much of a market until after the 150,000,000 pounds of brass held by the government are disposed of. The War Department had the brass left on its hands by the armistice. Brass manufacturers are big copper buyers normally.

Nothing has been said of late regarding any export business in copper. Edward Moschauer of the United Metals Selling Company is to go to Switzerland and then to Germany to represent the Copper Export Association. He will be on the spot to supply German demands when they are able to finance purchases.

Platinum Exports

For July the Department of Commerce reports exports of platinum amounting to $10,952 and platinum manufactures valued at $174. During that month there were imported 4072 ounces of platinum, iridium, osmium, and combinations of these. Their total value was $429,548. Imports of platinum unmanufactured totaled 3,684 ounces, valued at $374,592.

City Loans

Gardner, Mass., has sold to the First National Bank of Gardner at 4.55 per cent. discount a temporary loan of $25,000, dated September 18, and maturing December 31, 1919.

Meriden, Conn., has sold to the First National Bank of Meriden, Conn., $60,000 4½ per cent. municipal funding bonds, dated July 1, 1919, and maturing $15,000 1930 to 1933 inclusive, for a premium of $714.60.

Cambridge, Mass., will receive bids at discount until noon September 22, for temporary loan of $100,000, dated September 25, 1919, maturing January 15, 1920.

Worcester, Mass., will receive bids until noon today for $100,000 revenue notes, dated September 19, 1919, maturing November 26.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Sept. 18.—The cotton market opened steady, with an advance of seven points to decline of four points. Under local and Southern selling, induced by favorable weather and the unsettling labor news, there was a further decline of some twenty-five points before the end of fifteen minutes. Opening prices were: October 29.50 to 29.55, up 2 to 7; December, 29.80, up 4; January, 29.75 to 29.72, unchanged to off 3; March, 29.86, unchanged; May 29.84, off 4.

High Ocean Freights

It is believed in shipping circles that there will be no great reduction in ocean freight rates for several years, although gross merchant tonnage is nearly 2,500,000 tons in excess of what it was in 1914. Cost of operating and repairing ships must come down before freights can be lowered, it is stated.

Labor Owes Fealty to the State and State Owes Labor Justice

A news dispatch in the Denver Post, says:

"When informed of the action of Commissioner Curtis of Boston in declaring vacant the posts of the striking policemen there, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, said: 'I suppose he is willing to assume the responsibility for the consequences of his action.' He would make no further comment."

Probably Commissioner Curtis will be willing to assume the responsibility for his action, and assuredly about nine-tenths of the American people will be willing to share the responsibility with him.

The people of the United States have been shocked at the action of the Boston police in deserting their posts and leaving their city exposed to rioters and plunderers.

The question involved is not the right of organized labor to strike. Every thinking human being admits the right of ordinary employes to organize and to quit work when conditions are unsatisfactory and to be taken back when conditions are amended.

But policemen are not ordinary employes. They are the trusted guardians of the peace and safety of the public. They owe the State the heroic service of the soldier and they can no more, while remaining in the service, shirk their responsibilities and desert their duties than the soldier can.

It is an utterly intolerable thing that such trusted public servants should not acknowledge their first duty to the State, but should seek to render an allegiance to some class organization superior to that which they render to the whole public.

It is a fundamentally demoralizing thing that the instituted forces of law and order should desert their responsible posts and so abet the rioting forces of lawlessness and disorder.

Governor Coolidge and the police commissioner are entirely in line with public sentiment everywhere when they declare that public servants who have demonstrated their disloyalty to the public interests they are supposed to serve, shall not be returned to posts for which they have proven their conspicuous unfitness.

And Mr. Gompers is in no way wise when he attempts to ally his army of reputable labor union men with abettors of anarchy and fomenters of disorder.

Whether Mr. Gompers appreciates it or not, he is inviting on his honest followers the hostility which all impartial Americans must feel to those who would assail the people's government by force or undermine it with treachery.

This government of ours is not an irresponsible autocracy in which the people have no voice and where force must be employed to compel a recognition of popular rights. It is a democracy, "deriving its powers from the consent of the governed." It is a free republic, in which the popular ballot determines changes in laws, modifications in constitutions and replacements of public officials. It is not a government by any class nor for any class.

The people as a whole would resent a government by the labor union class, quite as much as they would resent a government by the capitalistic class. Most of all, they resent a government by the lawless and disorderly class which has sought to secure control in Boston, and with which Mr. Gompers, with amazing folly, has endeavored to unite his honorable following.

Mr. Gompers, do not deprive your followers of the sympathy and, indeed, of the support of the plain, law-abiding, law-respecting citizens. That sympathy and that support have been among the most potent factors in winning for labor the better conditions, and the increases in wages it has so generally of late succeeded in securing.

The whole fair minded American public has realized that the cost of living has doubled, and that, if we are to maintain for our American masses the high standard of living which is our boast and which it has been one of the main objects of our free government and our liberal social system to provide, we must allow the workers to secure a largely increased compensation for that efficient productive labor which is at the basis of all our prosperity.

Realizing this, the whole public has not only sympathized with the legitimate demands of labor, but has co-operated very considerably in obtaining them.

But this same fair minded public will not sympathize with any alliance on the part of labor leaders with disloyal or disorderly elements in the community, nor will the public tolerate any attempt of any class to obtain by force power out of proportion to its voting numbers, whether the intent be to use that power arbitrarily for its own selfish interest or not.

Indeed, through the exercise of such violent methods, labor would find that it had not only lost the sympathy but had aroused the active antagonism of that great judicious body of the citizenship without the support of which no cause can prosper or should prosper in this free republic.

On the other hand, and in full fairness, there is, however, a word to be said—not by any means to excuse the methods employed by the police of Boston, but to concentrate attention upon unfair conditions which tend to arouse intense discontent, not only among underpaid public servants but among employes who are underpaid anywhere.

Every informed individual knows that the dollar at present has only a fraction of its former purchasing power, and in order that a man and his family may live as well as they did before the war it is necessary for them to have many more dollars than they had then.

If a man, therefore, has only the same wage that he had before the war he can only live about half as well as he lived then, and that half as well may come dangerously near to the point of absolute penury.

We all know, to our shame, that policemen and public employes as a rule have received but little increase in wage, notwithstanding the tremendous increase in the cost of living.

A policeman is a public servant pledged to protect our social and political systems and to maintain the established order. But what must he come to think of an established order which by its neglect and indifference and parsimony brings an honest man holding a responsible position to the verge of destitution.

Does he need much argument from anarchistic incitors to convince him of the unfairness of social and political systems which have already impressed their injustice upon him and the family he loves?

Liberal minded, generous hearted, public spirited citizens of the United States, we should not aid the apostles of discontent to make converts to their anarchistic cause. We should not furnish the proof of the inequality and injustice, the neglect and indifference which the evangels of anarchy assert and which we blandly and oftentimes blindly deny. This country is rich enough and it should be wise enough to pay its servants well and, indeed, to give all its workers their due share of the prosperity they so largely help to create.

Anarchy is the misshapen child of injustice. Say it is the offspring of ignorance if you will, but what is ignorance but the worst form of injustice?

In this liberal land of ours all injustice must be corrected. Only so can our people remain free and equal.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Criminal to Send Our Money Abroad to Support Wars

Senator Walsh of Massachusetts has very wisely introduced a resolution which recites that the United States has already loaned the foreign nations billions of dollars, Great Britain, as usual, most of all in the amount of more than four billion 300 million, and France more than three billion, which together with the loans to other nations make a total of nearly 10 thousand million dollars.

He recites further that the President has declared that four or five thousand million more of good American money must be loaned to these foreign nations. Then the Senator in his resolution continues:

> Whereas, in the opinion of the Senate the rivalry of nations in the increase of armaments is a most prolific cause of war, and a continuance of such rivalry at the present time is totally subversive of the principles and theories upon which the Senate is urged to ratify the league covenant and the treaty of peace, and therefore such increases of armament should not be aided or made possible by loans of the resources or credit of the United States; therefore be it
>
> Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that no further advances of the money or credit of the United States should be made to any foreign government except upon satisfactory evidence that no part of such advances, and no part of the funds of the government soliciting them, is being used or to be used for the increase of armaments, or for any military purpose aside from a reasonable and publicly declared provision for security against internal violence and disorder, or for carrying out the military obligations incurred in the war against Germany and her allies.

The spectacle of the United States lending these nations her money to dissipate in imperialistic wars, great and petty, for loot and spoil and for the purpose of destroying democracy wherever it dares to raise its head, is a spectacle never presented by the American people before in its whole history.

The difficulty with Senator Walsh's resolution is that the test which he makes of the propriety of lending England and France money is inadequate. There is no way of determining that the money is not going to be used for increasing their armies and navies. A nation has so much money to spend, it has so much expense to meet. If this government helps it to meet SOME of its expenses, why then it can appropriate more of its OWN money for its other expenses, like the army and navy.

The only thing that the United States can do, if it is determined not to become a party to the orgy of freebooting and the plundering of little nations and denying of self-determination and pogroms and murdering and starving of whole peoples all for a dirty dollar, is to get out of every relation with these nations, whose hands are bloody with their crimes, and stop lending them money so long as they are engaged in waging these wars and perpetrating these crimes.

Let the French people throw out its present government, which is wasting French lives and French treasure in a war against the Russian people, not to collect the Russian debt to France, for that the Russian people are willing to pay, but to give the French moneyed class a chance to steal everything they can get their hands on in Russia. Let the French people throw out their present government and put in a government that will bring the French troops home and demobilize them, and let them begin to produce wealth that will make the French war profiteers pay something toward the expenses of their government. Let the French people put in a government that will halt its imperialism generally, stop its interfering with the right of self-determination in Hungary and in Austria, and put its military class where it ought to be—subordinate to the civil authorities.

Let the English people put a government into power that will stop the war against Russia, that will stop the oppressions and outrages in Ireland and in Egypt, Persia, Mesapotamia and Ireland and thus enable the English army and English navy to be reduced and their expenses to be reduced accordingly.

When the French people and the British people have done this and thus indicated that they propose that their nations shall lead moral, international lives, then we can, if they need money, lend it to them. But while one-third of the children of New York city are undernourished from want of food and while the same condition is prevailing throughout our cities to a less degree perhaps, but still to a sad degree, it is a crime that is blasphemous to give our money to the imperialists and exploiters and hypocrites now controlling France and England to be poured down the rat hole of war for the profit of bankers and international adventurers who follow armies and plunder helpless populations as the jackal and hyena follow the lion.

About Women's Fashions

The other day the women physicians of the United States, England and France had a conference in New York.

They attacked women's fashions vigorously and called attention to some mistakes in clothing made for children. The garter and suspender strap are said to cause the shoulder to stoop and too short stockings to deform the feet.

One American speaker urged a compulsory yearly examination of children, while both the English and French representatives suggested that examination should be made only upon consent of the parents. If the examination is worth anything, the foolish piccadillo of a parent ought not to deprive a child of its value.

We well remember some years ago, when Wu Fing Tang was Chinese ambassador to the United States—those were the days before a President of the United States betrayed China, our faithful friend and ally, to her enemy, Japan, when a Chinese ambassador felt at home in America—Wu Fing Tang was probably the ablest man among the foreign representatives in Washington and certainly the ablest speaker. He was invited to a meeting of women. At the meeting some woman expressed a regret that the Chinese women should be so unintelligent and so enslaved to a superstitious custom that they should deform their feet and make them look smaller. Ambassador Wu, with that gentle humor which endeared him to everyone who heard him, asked the assembled women which part of the human anatomy was nearer the vitals, the waist or the foot, and where too much strapping and lacing would do more harm, at the waist or at the foot. It was some moments before the audience appreciated the direction in which the Chinaman was driving, but when finally he put the question directly to the ladies whether or not it was not a more barbarous custom to lace and deform the waist than to lace and deform the feet, he was greatly applauded.

Not only is there great complaint against fashions of women, but against the rapid change of fashion which makes it so expensive for women of moderate means to keep up to the style. An important step in the reduction in the cost of living would be to make women's style somewhat conform in consistency and constancy with the styles of men.

ON A busy corner.
• • •
A POOR fellow fainted.
• • •
HE LOOKED down and out.

AND PERHAPS he was a bum.

WHO LOOKED at her.
• • •
SO WONDERINGLY.
• • •
WHEN HE came to.
• • •
AND I guess he thought.
• • •
IT WAS just a dream.
• • •
WHEN HE saw that face
• • •
LEANING OVER him.
• • •
OR HE may have thought.
• • •
THAT SHE was an angel.
• • •
COME DOWN to earth.
• • •
BUT ANYWAY.
• • •
WHATEVER HE thought.
• • •
IN A little while.
• • •
AN AMBULANCE came.
• • •
AND THEY took him away.
• • •
TO A hospital.
• • •
AND SHE went on.
• • •
AND DOWN the street.
• • •
AND MAYBE I've bored you.
• • •
BUT, K. C. B.,
• • •
I HAD to tell someone.
• • •
AND WHY not you?

I THANK you.

Clergyman Analyzes the Famous Tanner Case

EARLY in the month the entire nation was stirred by the story of the heroic self-sacrifice of William Tanner, who, when his wife was helplessly in a railroad track with a speeding express bearing down on her, clasped her in his arms and died with her rather than leave the woman he loved to face death alone.

But for the fact that Tanner, in giving his life thus to comfort his wife, left three small children to face the world alone, his act would have won him the united admiration of the world. The abandonment of the helpless youngsters, however, has divided opinion on the matter. Some critics declare that the man's duty lay rather with his living children than with his dead wife.

The Rev. C. Nelson Moller, vicar of St. Chrystostem's Church of Trinity Parish, New York, has written his analysis of the matter, a representative churchman's view of the terrible affair. Not every one will agree with him, but he presents a paper of extraordinary force. Read Rev. Mr. Moller's brilliant analysis of the Illinois tragedy in the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Male citizens of the United States, carefully guarded as they are against impure food, water and other necessaries of life, expose themselves daily to the danger of contracting one of the most terrible diseases known to science.

The worst of it is that they are entirely ignorant of their danger, which faces them each morning in the guise of a most innocent object—the shaving brush with which the morning's toilet is assisted. The disease germs which may lurk among the bristles of your shaving brush are those of anthrax, a malady which has long puzzled science and which physicians even today are unable to treat with any measure of confidence.

The germ cannot be destroyed by a mere washing in hot water, the only treatment often given the bristles used in cheap brushes. A most interesting article in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, by Rene Bache, tells why you should always insist that your shaving brush come from a manufacturer who realizes and guards against the possibility of anthrax infection.

America's master criminal, whose activities in American department stores have brought the police to despair, is yet at work. This week's instalment of the Sunday Advertiser's instructive serial dealing with his machinations is one of the most interesting yet printed. Don't fail to read the article this week.

To the Editor

Want Liberty

Editor Boston American:

We have wives and mothers, sisters, and also sweethearts here, just the same as the officers of the navy. Do you think it is right to keep us on board of the ships in the yard while the strike is on in Boston? We are citizens of the United States. We are not in any other country than the U. S. A. And we, as American sailors, would like to have the rights of an American sailor. We have fought for the country and some have died for it. Don't you think that we should have the same rights to liberty as the officers? We have been interned since September 10. Our wives need the same protection as other men's wives.

A professor of a certain university was lecturing to a class of young working girls, his topic being "The Serious Side of Life." Suddenly he turned to a nicely dressed girl and remarked: "I suppose you consider the most serious thing in life to be the observing of the mandates of fashion?" "I've got one for every night this week," replied the girl promptly.
